Orders for Metal Pile Up in Britain

House Group Asks Ten $10,000 Experts to Guide Money Course.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Bobbing indecisively on the world money markets, the new Roosevelt dollar yesterday proved far stronger in relation to other currencies than had been expected.

This created the possibility of a heavy flow of gold to this country—both in the return of capital and for speculative profit—which engrossed Treasury experts studying the first day's reaction to the "new 1934 model gold bullion standard."

President Roosevelt's devaluation of the dollar to 59.06 per cent of its former gold worth, together with other regulations governing money, were so described during the day by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, who then lapsed into a long silence on operations of the new $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund.

Drops Little in London.

While the dollar depreciated in terms of most currencies, principal feature of the day was its buoyant activity at London, where the official closing found it only slightly weaker than Wednesday's last figure.

This was attributed in large part in the repatriation of capital, a movement which had been expected to follow "stabilization" of the American dollar at some fixed point. If this is true in any large sense, it may be some time before the new dollar finds a normal relationship to the British pound.

Other developments on the monetary situation, following Wednesday's unprecedented gold revaluation, yesterday included:

Approval by the House Ways and Means Committee of the employment of ten $10,000-a-year experts to guide the Treasury in its operation of the $2,000,000,000 currency fund.

An appeal for the creation of a permanent monetary authority of specialists, voiced before the House Banking Committee by Prof. Irving Fisher, Yale economist, who took occasion to criticize the Federal Reserve Board.

Listing by the Treasury for the first time the amount of gold now vested in the Government—$4,029,092,988—which, as now revalued, represents more than $6,800,000,000. The "profit" approximates $2,792,000,000.

Further advance on the stock market, with Government bonds firm, as inflationary aspects of the New Deal in money were realized. Gold shares, here and abroad, were extremely active.

Theoretical reduction of 40.94 per cent in the funded total of $12,352,000,000 in war debts

Reich Returns Austrian Note

Interference Complaint to League Is Held Not Proper.

Berlin, Feb. 1 (AP).—Germany today formally replied to Austria's threat to appeal to the League of Nations if Germany did not cease interference in Austrian affairs by rejecting point for point the several complaints, it was officially announced.

The German government, officials said, expressed the view the problem "is not one for international treatment and can not be solved in this way."

Konstantin von Neurath, foreign minister, handed the note to Austrian Minister Tauschnitz at 6 o'clock tonight, in reply to the Austrian warning of January 17.

The text of the note was not released, but it was understood to be exceptionally long.

New York, Feb. 1 (U.P.).—Eugene S. Daniell, jr., one-time candidate for President of the United States on the National Independent Party ticket, was found guilty late today of assault in connection with the tear-gas bombing of the New York Stock Exchange last August.

The jury recommended mercy. Daniell was committed to Tombs Prison without bail for sentence February 15.

Liner Rams Giant Whale, But Whale Makes It Detour

San Francisco, Feb. 1 (AP).—The Dollar liner President Taft, bound from San Francisco to New York, struck a giant whale early today 1,027 miles northwest of Balboa.

"The impact was terrific," the liner's wireless operator messaged, "I thought we'd hit a rock. The boat trembled violently and the passengers all ran out on deck."

He said the whale appeared stunned after the shock and remained on the surface, forcing the President Taft to reverse and detour around it.

Stocks, Bonds Boom in Wake Of Dollar Cut

Trading Hits Four-Year Record; Mine Shares in Big Demand.

New York, Feb. 1 (AP).—The world of finance acclaimed the mooring of the American dollar to a modified gold bullion base today by a brisk scramble for securities, particularly American securities, and by heavy buying of dollars.

In the New York Stock Exchange scores of bonds surged up $1 to $3 per $100 par value to new highs since 1931, in the heaviest dealings in the exchange's bond department on record, with the exception of one day four years ago.

Stocks likewise were eagerly bought in New York, many issues advancing $1 to $4 to the highest prices in more than two years, with trading reaching the biggest volume since last July, and overwhelming the quotation facilities.

Mining Stocks in Demand.

Mining stocks were in demand the world over, as the United States Treasury offered to buy unlimited amounts of gold at $35 an ounce.

Although the ultimate objective of the devaluation of the dollar to 59.06 per cent of its old parity was an increase in the American commodity price level, the response of the staples markets was less pronounced than that of securities.

The sluggish response of commodities was regarded as scarcely surprising, since monetary authorities urging a higher gold valuation as a means of lifting the general commodity price level explain that the prices of staple goods can not be expected immediattely to adjust themselves to the new gold level.

Wheat Rises, Then Drops.

Wheat at Chicago pushed up momentarily about a cent a bushel, then lost its rise. Cotton at New York finished only 10 to 30 cents a bale higher. Such staples as silk, wool, coffee, rubber and cocoa registered small gains in futures dealings at New York.

The rush to buy dollars prevented the American currency from adjusting itself immediately to its new parity, as indicated by its gold content of 15 5-21 grains of the yellow metal. The American currency declined slightly at such centers as London, Paris and Rome, then rebounded abruptly.

Bankers, after assurance that the Treasury regulations would permit, immediately began preparations for heavy gold buying abroad, so long as this premium exists. It was explained that this selling of dollars to buy foreign currencies to purchase gold should correct the disparity.

The New York Federal Reserve Bank took a significant step in the campaign to promote credit expansion late today in reducing its re-

There will be an ample margin for paying freight and insurance, leaving a handsome profit.

Sankey Link In Lindbergh Case Fails

Federal Agents Drop Extended Grilling of Abductor.

Chicago, Feb. 1 (AP).—Attempts to link him with the fatal abduction of the Lindbergh baby unsuccessful, Verne Sankey, notorious Northwest outlaw, was started to Sioux Falls, S. Dak., tonight to stand trial for the kidnaping of Charles Boettcher 2d, Denver capitalist.

Chicago, Feb. 1 (AP).—Relentless Federal investigators tonight continued to direct a constant bombardment of questions at Verne Sankey in an effort to connect him with the abduction of the infant son of Charles A. Lindbergh, but said that the desperado had not admitted any connection with the case.

"Sankey has not admitted a thing in connection with the Lindbergh case," said Melvin Purvis, head of the local Federal Bureau of Investigation, "but that does not mean a thing. We're keeping at him. Naturally, he would not admit this crime until trapped. I have reported our progress to Washington."

Three States—Colorado, Minnesota and South Dakota—have put in claims for Sankey, but all these are being held in abeyance, pending the outcome of the grilling directed by Purvis.

Two Kidnapings Admitted.

The desperado, captured in a barber shop here yesterday, has admitted he took part in the $12,000 kidnaping of young Haskel Bohn, of St. Paul, and the $60,000 ransom kidnaping of Charles Boettcher 2d, Denver capitalist, Purvis said.

From separate offices of the bureau, voices of Sankey and Miss Helen Mattern, who was arrested in Sankey's apartment, could be heard occasionally as they answered questions. Sankey's voice appeared patient and resigned, while that of Miss Mattern gave evidence of fatigue and hysteria.

The question of preference in the claims on Sankey was expected to be put in the hands of Joseph B. Keenan, Assistant U. S. Attorney General, who was reported today to have left New York for Chicago.

St. Paul Pushes Claim.

The most insistent demands for the custody of Sankey came from St. Paul, where he is under indictment on the Bohn kidnaping charge.

The kidnap victim's father, Gebhard Bohn, accompanied Thomas E. Dahill, St. Paul chief of police, and M. F. Kinkead, Ramsey County (St. Paul) prosecutor, to Chicago to work for the removal of the kidnap gang leader to the Minnesota city.

The St. Paul officers were armed with a request for extradition from Gov. Floyd B. Olson of Minnesota, which they said they would file at Springfield tomorrow.

Bohn's face flushed and his voice rose in anger as he told of the suffering he had undergone as a result of the kidnaping of his son.

"They (the kidnapers) wrecked me physically and financially," he declared. "I lost 42 pounds during that ordeal. It also was the deciding blow which put my refrigerator business on the rocks. I am going to do everything in my power to

Virginia House Votes Liquor Dispensary Bill

Senate Is Expected to Act Soon, With Business About March 1.

By Doug Warrenfels.

Richmond, Feb. 1.—Sale of legal liquor in Virginia approached reality today when the House passed a control bill calling for State dispensaries.

With the Senate due to complete legislative action within a week or 10 days, Gov. Peery announced he would sign the measure unless it should be radically altered in the upper House. The bill will become operative 15 days after legislative approval, or around March 1.

Leaders predicted the Senate would restore to $7,500 a year each the salaries of liquor board members, cut to $5,000 by the House. An ultimate compromise of $6,000 or $6,500 seemed probable.

Aim at New Taxes.

Meanwhile, weight was given to reports the Assembly would reject about half of the $1,000,000 in new taxes proposed by Gov. Peery when the Governor himself conceded he was examining "new evidence" on his program.

The Governor's statement was his first departure from an apparent intention to insist on passage of every item.

Delegate Daniel Coleman, Norfolk, cast the only vote against the liquor bill in the House, which voted to give the State all liquor profits by reconsidering an amendment passed yesterday under which political subdivisions would have received 65 per cent of such revenue. The vote was 53 to 38 on the amendment.

House approval without a record vote was given an amendment by

Four Men Trapped On Ice Floe Safe

28 Army Planes Aided in Hunt for Fishermen.

Bay City, Mich., Feb. 1 (AP).—The sheriff's office was notified late today that four fishermen who had been missing since they were trapped on an ice floe in Saginaw Bay yesterday afternoon, had reached shore and were at Quanicassee, Mich., about 10 miles east of here. They were being brought into Bay City.

The men, John Swantek, 32, Anthony Abare, 66; Charles King, jr., 17, and his brother, Lawrence, 19, had been sought by airplane and boat since they drifted out of view before a 40-mile gale late yesterday.

Twenty-eight Army airplanes joined in the search today.

House Probes Naval Plane Profiteering

Contractors' Books Will Be Scrutinized to Check Charges.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Hopeful that the Government soon will start spending around $370,000,000 to build a treaty Navy, the House Naval Committee today will start an inquiry aimed at keeping ship and airplane contractors from making excessive profits when the construction begins.

The inquiry was ordered, said Chairman Vinson of the Naval Committee, because of disclosures before the House Appropriations Committee that one airplane engine manufacturer had made a profit of 36 per cent on his Navy contracts.

"If profits like that are being made," Vinson said, "we'll stop it—even if it's necessary for the Government to go into the airplane-making business itself."

Audit of Books.

Ready for the committee to consider today is a special audit of aircraft makers' books from 1927 through 1933. It is summarized this way:

"An analysis of the audits of the aircraft industry indicates an average profit of 8 per cent on their naval aircraft production and a loss of 34 per cent on their experimental aircraft. This is an average operating profit of 4.3 per cent on total Navy business, that is, before deducting State and Federal taxes."

The receipts and expenditures of each company which has furnished planes for the Navy from 1927 through 1933 are analyzed individually. At the top of the list is one company—its name not given—which received $5,241,794 on Navy contracts.

The cost was $4,318,379, leaving a profit of 21 per cent.

The engine-manufacturing company which made a 36 per cent profit was said to have had a monopoly on a medium-powered engine which will not be powerful enough for future airplanes.

Profits Drop.

Furthermore, its profits, which averaged 36 per cent over the seven years, dropped to less than 20 per cent last year.

Vinson is not convinced—from a preliminary study of the audit—that airplane companies have been making excesive profits.

"I want to find out if they are," he said yesterday. "The only way we can do it is by a thorough investigation.

"We may find it necesary later to extend our investigation to ship construction too, but we have a check there. We have no Government airplane factories which compete with private contractors, but we do have Navy shipyards. If a ship contractor wants too much money, we find it out by comparing the bid with what the job would cost in a navy yard.

"We may find it necesary to reopen the airplane factory at Philadelphia, which was closed three years ago.

"We are not going to stand by and let the Government be at the mercy of any private company; we are not

New York, Feb. 1 (AP).—The Federal Government today abandoned its prosecution of Ervin F. Brown, former head of immigration service labor investigators here, on a charge of accepting bribes from an alien.

Brown, a nephew of the widow of former Secretary of Labor William N. Doak, was tried in December, but the jury was unable to agree on a verdict.

He had been indicted on a charge of accepting $450 from Joseph Belasco Morales, a Mexican with criminal record, who was slated for deportation. A nolle prosequi was filed at the order of United States Attorney Martin Conboy.

Long, Flanked by Guards, Hits Reporter, Then Speeds Away

(United Press.)

Senator Huey Long, supported by an advance guard, an infantry patrol on both flanks and a rear guard, tested his fighting strength yesterday by hitting a newspaperman with a cane, and then retired in good order to a previously prepared position on the Senate floor, where he is immune from all attacks except those of verbal nature.

The skirmish was hailed by military strategists last night as an unqualified triumph for Mr. Long, because he and his bodyguard succeeded in slipping out of their hotel and evading battle with New Orleans' strapping Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley. Walmsley, in Washington to confer about New Orleans public works projects, has announced that he intends to "thrash the daylights out of Huey" if they meet.

Mr. Long, with the military strategy he acquired in the battle of Sands Point washroom, planned his campaign yesterday with the cunning of a Napoleon. He knew Walmsley was in the same hotel, and that there was a fair chance they might meet on an elevator or in the lobby.

So he sent out a scouting expedition, consisting of a paunchy man with a gray felt hat tilted over his eyes. The scout patroled the hotel lobby carefully, looked behind potted palms and tested the revolving doors. Then he went back and reported that the coast was clear.

The elevator descended from the fourth floor. Out stepped Mr. Long and the four guards, looking very grim, indeed. Behind a flying wedge he dashed out the door to an automobile.

Up stepped Ray Moulden, of the

Heiress Sues to End Runaway Marriage

Merry Fahrney Asserts 'Certain Liquids' Led to Elopement.

Los Angeles, Feb. 1 (AP).—A marriage annulment suit was filed here today by Merry Fahrney Eiszner, heiress to the Fahrney patent medicine fortune. She said that because of "certain liquids" given her she did not realize she was being wed to Frank Van Sands Eiszner at Aurora, Ill., last November 10.

She eloped with the socially prominent Oak Park (Ill.) man within a week after her romance with Count Giorgio de Giorgio, of Italy, was interrupted by his deportation.

After filing suit today, Mrs. Eiszner would not say whether she has any idea of marrying the count. Her lawyer, however, quoted her as saying:

"I think I'll go to Paris. The count will be there."

When Count de Giorgio was on a Chili-bound ship last November 4, under an immigration ruling that his passport had expired, Merry said she was going to follow him, but a week later she surprised friends by eloping with Eiszner. She had been divorced from Hugh Pickering, of Chicago.

In the complaint today, she charged her marriage to Eiszner was performed without her consent, and if she had known what she was doing she would not have gone through with the ceremony.

She said "by reason of certain liquids which had been given" her, the exact nature of which she could not describe, "she was not in a condition to understand or appreciate" the nature of the proceedings. She "did not know or realize she was

Japan's War Chief Scoffs U. S. Conflict

Likewise Asserts Russia Must Make First Move to Fight.

Tokyo, Feb. 1 (AP).—There will be no Russo-Japanese war "unless the war is carried to us by the other side," Gen. Senjuro Hayashi told the Associated Press today in the first interview since his appointment as war minister, succeeding Gen. Sadao Araki.

At the same time, Hayashi said he was "incapable of conceiving any Japanese-American differences justifying a belief in a future Japanese-American war."

"We are making no preparations for war with Russia," the general said flatly. "Our dispositions in Manchuria are merely aimed at fulfilling our treaty obligations to defend Manchukuo."

Peace Is Aim, He Says.

"We are out for peace," Hayashi continued, declaring that charges made by Soviet leaders in speeches that the Japanese army is plotting the seizure of the Russian's maritime province of northern Saghalien is absurd."

"No responsible officer in the Japanese army harbors any such designs or ambitions," he said.

The war minister expressed the opinion that "the enthronement of Henry Pu-Yi and the inauguration of an empire in Manchuria will, I am confident, prove a stabilizing factor in the promotion of peace in the Orient."

Pu-Yi, present chief executive of the Japanese-assisted state of Manchukuo, is to be enthroned March 1.

Hayashi said "our protocol with Manchukuo obligates us to defend Manchukuo within its present boundaries.

Denies Near Conquests.

"The Japanese army will not assist in any attempt to extend the territory of Manchukuo in any direction. We will not assist in any schemes to join Chahar and Hopei Provinces (in China) to Manchukuo."

Chinese reports recently have asserted that the Japanese planned to annex certain territories surrounding Manchukuo after the coronation of Pu-Yi.

Of relations between Japan and the United States, Hayashi said:

"I am incapable of conceiving any Japanese-American differences justifying any belief in a future Japanese-American war.

"When the Japanese navy insists on increased ratios, Americans should understand that does not mean preparations are being made to fight America.

Man Blind for 25 Years Sees With Grafted Eyes

London, Feb. 1 (U.P.).—Another "miracle" of surgery was reported today, when H. H. Watson, 29, blind for 25 years, gradually began recovering his sight through corneas which were grafted on his eyes.

Woman Dies With Doctor In Death Pact

Texas Physician Believed to Have Administered Fatal Hypodermic.

Austin, Tex., Feb. 1 (AP).—Victims of an apparent suicide pact, Dr. Claude Mattingly, 39, child specialist, and Mrs. F. A. C. Perrin, 35, wife of a psychology professor at the University of Texas, were found dead in a hotel room here today.

Their bodies were on a bed and there was evidence that they had gone methodically about ending their lives. Physicians said they believed Dr. Mattingly had given Mrs. Perrin a fatal injection, and then administered it to himself.

Dr. Mattingly was last seen Tuesday night at a hospital. Mrs. Perrin's absence from home had not been reported. Dr. Perrin secluded himself after learning of the tragedy.

News Kept From Children.

Dr. Mattingly's wife, from whom he had been separated, was withholding news of their father's death from his two children. The Perrins did not have any children.

Tom E. Johnson, justice of the peace, said he would return a verdict of double suicide.

A note, or will, left in the room by Mrs. Perrin disappeared from possession of police, they said. It was understood the document had been given to a lawyer.

Investigators said they believed the couple had been dead at least 12 hours.

Popular as a Student.

Mrs. Perrin was Miss Rhea Burgess, of Dallas, when she married the university professor on September 22, 1921, a little more than a year after she received her bachelor of arts degrees from the University of Texas, where she was popular during her student days.

Dr. Mattingly had been practicing here for about six years. He served in the Marine Corps during the World War and was decorated with a Croix de Guerre. He studied medicine at the University of Texas medical branch in Galveston.

Prof. Perrin taught at the University of Pittsburgh before coming to Texas in 1917.

Pulitzer Resigns NRA Code Post

New York, Feb. 1 (AP).—Ralph Pulitzer, a member of the noted publishing family, tonight announced his resignation as NRA division administrator in charge of the newspaper and allied codes.

"I have resigned," he said in a statement, "because I feel that the opposition to my appointment by the American Newspaper Guild would cast doubt on my impartiality in any question concerning its members.

"Another reason is that the St. Louis Post Dispatch feels itself seriously embarrassed in either support of or opposition to the NRA and myself while I hold this appointment."

Crack Train Hits Auto Near Capital

Maryland and Virginia Blanketed; Airway Service Halted.

Swirling down steadily, an 8-inch fall of snow had coated the city by 8 p. m. yesterday, choking traffic, causing numerous accidents and bearing a new menace as freezing temperatures set in with nightfall.

Though Weather Bureau experts saw early cessation of the snowfall, hundreds of machines were stalled in nearby Maryland, Virginia and outlying sections of the city; taxicab, bus and street car travel was semi-paralyzed, and underfoot going was treacherous.

Train, telegraph and telephones were functioning normally early in the evening as reports poured in from special correspondents and the Associated Press of highway traffic jams along the Eastern seaboard.

Frederick, Md., reported its heaviest snow of the winter, with like conditions prevailing through Western Maryland from Montgomery County to the Allegheny Mountains beyond Cumberland.

Work on Projects Halted.

From Newmarket and Harrisonburg, Va., came dispatches telling of paralysis of traffic and outdoor work in the Shenandoah Valley as the snow fell without halt.

Between Baltimore and Washington traffic moved at a snail's pace. All hills were littered with cars, either come to grief or unable to get up enough traction to move.

National Limited No. 1, crack Baltimore & Ohio passenger train from New York to St. Louis, crashed into a stalled automobile at Hanover, Md., 15 miles north of Washington, late yesterday afternoon.

No one was injured, first reports said. The train crew was unable to see the stalled vehicle in the swirling snowstorm, they said. The limited was held up for more than an hour.

Although accidents were numerous in and around the city, few were serious.

Ten Rockville High School boys and girls narrowly escaped injury when a sedan into which they were crowded crashed through a lattice-work fence at the Chevy Chase swimming pool and overturned.

Driven by Aaron W. Hersberger, of Poolesville, the sedan had left Rockville shortly after noon, when the group was excused after mid-year examinations. Bound for a Washington theater, the car skidded. The passengers climbed out uninjured.

Seven were hurt, at least two seriously, as the driving snow be-

Jury Weighing Touhey's Fate

State Demands Death for Trio in Factor Kidnap.

Chicago, Feb. 1 (AP).—The case of Roger Touhy and two others for the $70,000 kidnaping of John Factor was given to the jury shortly after 4 p. m. with a plea for the death penalty asked by the prosecutor.

By both direct and circumstantial evidence, said Assistant State's Attorney Wilbert Crowley, the State had proved the kidnapers of Factor, stock trader wanted in England for a $7,000,000 fraud, were Touhy, Gustav Schaefer, and Albert Kator.

His closing argument followed one in which Defense Attorney William Scott Stewart said that Factor never was kidnaped for ransom, that at the most he was only held by the Capone gang, rivals of the Touhys, until he had paid money owed them.

That money was owed, Stewart declared, for services rendered by Murray Humphreys and Sam Hunt, Capone gangsters, in obtaining the release from kidnapers of Factor's son, Jerome, last April, two months before the speculator himself was abducted.

Majority Tax Report Urges Early Reforms

Declines Rise in Intangible Rates; Adams Offers Minority Study.

Richmond, Feb. 1 (AP).—Agreeing that real estate is bearing a heavier burden of taxation than intangibles, but presenting diametrically opposing views as to what should be done about it, majority and minority reports were issued this afternoon from the Joint Legislative Commission.

The majority report, signed by six of the seven members, declined to recommend an increase in the tax on intangibles, asked for a change in the method of assessing the physical properties of public service corporations, and asserted that relief from high real estate tax was possible through reform in local tax administration and governmental organization.

The minority report, signed by Delegate Berkeley D. Adams, of Charlotte, asserted that real estate was bearing 76 per cent of the cost of the schools, and was overtaxed, and recommended an increase of $8,427,638 in the tax on intangibles, by which the State would take over and finance the entire cost of instruction (salaries of teachers) in the schools, thus permitting local tax reduction.

Fears Canceled Values.

In brief the majority found, that the tax on intangibles should be increased; that to increase the tax would encourage concealment of values; that an increase would be detrimental to real estate as a large part of the taxable bonds and notes are secured by real estate.

That whether real estate is overtaxed is a matter of opinion; that there is no known rule by which it can be said that real estate is overtaxed.

That inequalities exist among assessments of property owners in the same locality, although matters of comon knowledge.

That laws relating to the assessment of property by the State corporation commission need revision; that in the assessments of public service corporations the ratio of assessed value to actual value of the physical properties should be the same as is the ratio in the case of ordinary real estate.

That a large amount of tangible personal property and merchants capital is escaping full and fair taxation; that cities could revise local ordinances and improve enforcement to relieve real estate.

That improvement in local government would go a long way toward relieving real estate.

Can Suggest Only Sales.

That a shift of a material part of the real estate tax to intangible or State subjects, involves millions of dollars, and the committee has been unable to suggest any other than a general retail sales tax.

That a tremendous increase in the State school appropriation would be necessary to afford relief to real estate.

That a 1 per cent general retail sales tax, which the committee does not recommend at this time, would yield approximately $4,000,000.

Mr. Adams asserted his program would not increase the total tax burden at all but would equalize taxes.

The Charlotte delegate said real estate, especially farms ,asw without income in many sections, and that it was being taxed to the point of confiscation. He recommended that the State supply the entire cost of school instruction, which was $13,626,626 in 1932-33, which would involve an increase in the State's appropriation of $7,285,195.

Urges Economies.

Mr. Adams recommended the following economies and tax changes:

He will have direct supervision of all civil cases, while Pine will act as an executive assistant.

Idaho Women Called Safest Auto Drivers

Pocatello, Idaho (U.P.).—Contrary to general opinion, women are safer drivers of automobiles than men. Statistics of 1933 automobile accidents in Pocatello proves it.

Of the 372 crashes, men caused 82.8 per cent, the records show, while women figured in 17.2 per cent. Seventy-one persons were seriously injured. Most of the accidents involved persons 21 years of age or younger.

$10 Meal Costs Lamb Trip to Slaughterhouse

Norwalk, Ohio (U.P.).—Lambs, as well as goats, seem to relish odd miscellany in their diet, a farmer near here learned when one of his woolly pets in an unnkind moment swallowed a perfectly good $10 bill.

Urban Fritz, the farmer, had placed the bill on the top of a scales platform. A breeze blew it to the ground. The lamb sniffed it. Fritz turned around, but too late. Fritz found the ten only slightly crumpled in the animal's stomach.

French Reject 'Re-Arm' Plans Of 3 Nations

Paris, Feb. 1 (AP).—France rejected Germany's offer of nonaggression pacts and charged Chancellor Hitler's program "would lead directly to an armaments race" in a note, published tonight, which was sent the German government on January 1.

A cool reception likewise was given British and Italian arms plans which recognized Germany's claim to equality in armaments and proposed that the heavily-armed powers should not increase their forces.

The French note to Chancellor Hitler stressed "disarmament," official quarters said, while the German, British and Italian projects all emphasized "rearmament."

Ask Reich Return to League.

France accepted none of Hitler's recent proposals, but left the door open for future conversations, and made a strong appeal to Germany to "associate herself in the indispensable policy of international collaboration within the framework of the League of Nations."

The declaration also was made that direct conversations between French and German statesmen could not settle the arms problem "which is essentially European in nature."

A solution of Franco-German differences was called "impossible to envisage" unless Germany returns to the league, from which she withdrew last fall.

Arms Race Feared.

Hitler's "complete rearmament program" would lead to a renewal of an arms race, the communication went on.

Emphasis was placed on the desirability of a test period of arms control, to which Germany objects. Chancellor Hitler was asked if he intended to accept "practical control measures" already outlined at Geneva.

In reply to Germany's demand for an army of 300,000, the assertion was made that military problems would thereby be raised, since semimilitary forces like Nazi Storm Troopers must be included in any estimates of effectives.

Would Limit Artillery.

France proposed the scrapping of 50 per cent of her military planes, if other powers agreed to do likewise, and the eventual internationalization of all European aviation.

The French offered to limit artillery by a future arms convention to 150 millimeters, but said any agreement betwen France and Germany relative to figures would be insufficient, as all Europe must be taken into consideration.

8he French plan provides for two phases. During the first, the French army would be reduced and the German army simultaneously would be transformed—both becoming eventually short-term home defensive forces with parity in numbers. Semimilitary organizations would have to be considered as soldiers.

Oppose British, Italian Views.

France would agree to make no more guns of war materials and to limit artillery to 150 millimeters.

During the first period a control scheme would begin functioning to enforce the agreements. During the second phase the actual destruction of guns outlawed in treaties would begin, and Germany would be permitted weapons as provided for in a new agreement.

The French object to the British and Italian plans, officials said, because they would let Germany rearm, while France would simultaneously be disarmed.

wildered several drivers, causing three accidents within a 30-minute period late yesterday at New York avenue and Bladensburg road northeast.

A few minutes later cars driven by Guy E. Dodge, 26, of 1149 Owens place northeast, and George Clark, 37, of 1304½ North Capital street, collided.

John Melody, 27, of 74 New York avenue northeast, passenger in Clark's car, received head and other injuries. He was taken to Garfield Hospital, as was Clark. James Brown, 27, of 501 Rhode Island avenue northwest, another passenger in Clark's machine, was not seriously hurt.

James Colder, 27, of 685 Eighth street northwest, a passenger in Dodge's machine, sustained a possibly fractured skull and was taken to Sibley Hospital. Dodge was not injured.

Bystander at Wreck Struck.

Thirty minutes after the second crash, James Sherwood, 40, of 1300 Monroe street northeast, a bystander helping to untangle wreckage, was struck at the same spot by a car driven by Marvin Stevens, 20, of Arnold Park, Md.

At noon yesterday snow plows were ordered out on all main roads in Arlington, Fairfax, Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties. In the two Virginia areas, some progress was made and bus traffic was functioning with some degree of success last night. The fall in Montgomery County was 10 inches last night.

Struck by a falling beam weakened by snow as she walked along the street near her home, Mrs. Mary Adkins, 38, of 825 Four-and-one-half street southwest, was taken to Emergency Hospital in a critical condition.

Police said she was walking past a building under construction at 831 Four-and-one-half street southwest. She was pinned beneath the falling beam and rendered unconscious. Physicians said she suffered a possible fractured spine and skull.

More than 6,000 children were absent from school yesterday in Washington as the wet snow threatened health and mobility between homes and schools.

John B. Gordon, District sanitary engineer, promised that between 600 and 700 men would go to work at 6 o'clock this morning clearing streets.

Late yesterday a huge tree fell across Nineteenth street northwest, between E and F streets northwest, causing delay to thousands of homegoing Government employes as street car lines were blocked.

Practically all airplane traffic around Washington was suspended by noon yesterday. Three planes got in before noon from New York and one ship got in from Cleveland and Pittsburgh. Air mail flights are temporarily cancelled.

Truck Driver Killed.

Two heavy trucks crashed head-on on the Richmond highway, near Fredericksburg, late in the afternoon, killing one driver. Authorities had not identified the dead man immediately. The accident was attributed to the snow.

Mrs. Walter E. Perry, Montgomery County superintendent of aid, escaped injury when her car crashed into a truck that had stopped abruptly near Rockville on the main road. Carl Ewing, of McLean, Va., was said to be driver of the truck.

Mrs. Lottie Sims, of Gaithersburg, Md., was injured when her car was in a skid collision with one driven by David H. Sigal, of Pittsburgh, a mile north of Rockville.

Montgomery County School Superintendent Edwin C. Broom took Mrs. Sims to a physician in Rockville. Later Mrs. Sims was taken to the Montgomery County General Hospital, where her condition was regarded as serious.

Foreign Marts Hold Interest.

While the lid was put on operations on the new $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, interest shifted to foreign exchanges and the effect of the Administration's policy on the dollar abroad. Dispatches of the Associated Press and the United Press showed:

Opening at $5.03⅛ in relation to sterling at London, off 7½ cents, the dollar bounded back, to close officially at $4.97⅞, only three-eighths of a cent above Wednesday's close. Late unofficial trading moved the rate to $4.97½ to the pound.

The gold price soared to new heights, 135 shillings 6 pence a fine ounce, as orders piled up on London bullion markets. Since this is about $33.72 at the prevailing rate, a speculator could buy bars and ship bullion to this country at handsome profit, as the Treasury is paying $35 an ounce.

While some thus foresaw the start of a tremendous "gold rush" to the United States, others believed any large movement would force France and other countries on the gold standard to put an embargo on the metal in retaliation.

London "Bullish" on U. S.

In London the strength of the dollar, which created this anomalous condition, was explained in some quarters as due not only to the return of capital, but also to a bullish attitude toward the recovery campaign in this country.

Speculation on some stabilization agreement between this country and Great Britain, whose huge stabilization fund may lock horns in an international currency battle with our own, was called premature. Whatever will be done in this direction, as confidently expected, will be kept secret by officials on both sides.

The new dollar, now "stabilized" at least for the time being, was welcomed as an approach to the gold standard by French financial circles. It dropped 28 centimes in relation to the franc, closing at 15.65 francs.

France Clings to Gold Base.

Finance Minister Francois Pietri, in an official statement, denies France would be driven off the gold standard, reaffirming the policy of his predecessors. Similarly, central banks of Switzerland, Holland and Belgium, the continent gold standard countries, were understood to be ready to defend their positions.

While several millions in gold will leave with the steamship Bremen Saturday to take advantage of the $35 price in New York, Americans living abroad complained against a dollar which ultimately will mean a 40 per cent cut in their money. Particularly hard hit were Government employes abroad.

Berlin looked to a tranquilizing effect from the new dollar, and at Rome bankers said they expected no marked fluctuations against the lire until stabilization against foreign currencies has been declared.

While the marked bouyancy of the dollar at London was ascribed generally to the owners of capital sent abroad buying dollars to bring them back, some thought the British fund may have been brought to bear to fight the effects of President Roosevelt's dollar devaluation.

See $35 World Gold Price.

Unless the dollar drops more readily, either by dwindling support from this source or for other reasons, observers believe this country's fund will enter the market to buy foreign currencies. Ultimately, this Government believes the world gold price will be established at President Roosevelt's $35 figure.

Incidental to dollar revaluation, Treasury officials estimated that England's war debt will be cut from $4,636,000,000 to $2,738,000,000; France's from $3,960,000,000 to $2,738,000,000; Italy's from $2,338,000,000 to $1,185,000,000. This is figured by comparison of the new dollar content with the old.

Meanwhile, the RFC yesterday surrendered its gold holdings, acquired by the progressive devaluation of the dollar before the point of stabilization was fixed, to the Treasury. The corporation received actual cost for its approximately $108,000,000 worth of gold, Chairman Jesse H. Jones said.

"1934 Model Standard."

"The best way to describe our currency," was Secretary Morgenthau's only comment during the day, "is a 1934 model gold bullion standard. It is one that suits our purposes."

This definition covered the policy of buying and selling gold at $35 an ounce, while still maintaining an embargo against its use as currency. Regulations covering the purchase of gold were elaborated yesterday in an announcement by Mr. Morgenthau, in which he named the New York Federal Reserve Bank as the Treasury's fiscal agent.

The immediate effect of the revalued dollar, as expected, was virtually nothing. While stocks went up, commodities were not as responsive. The ultimate purpose of this new deal is the expansion of credit, increase in prices and stimulation of foreign trade.

Publishers Hit NRA Fixing Of Paper Price

Threaten Court Action; Cite Low Canadian Rates for British.

(Associated Press.)

An effort by the newsprint producing industry of this country and Canada to fix prices yesterday encountered determined opposition from American publishers, who left with National Recovery officials a virtual threat to go to court should it be necessary.

The newsprint code authority asked for modification of the existing code to include an agreement, tentatively negotiated with the Canadian mills, for holding the price at a basic $41 a ton delivered. Though maintaining even this price would not cover the actual cost of many mills on both sides of the border.

The publishers attacked the plan as illegilly monopolistic and uneconomic, saying they would not be expected to pay the cost of preserving an American industry which was not able to supply their requirements, and that the Canadians would be the ones to profit. Objection also was presented to the plan of the mills to absorb transportation costs and eliminate any advantages held by newspapers able to avail themselves of low water transportation rate when buying f. o. b. the mill.

NRA Plan Called Illegal.

This attitude led NRA's Deputy Administrator W. W. Pickard to observe:

"Your contention is that newsprint should be sold f. o. b. and 'the devil take the hindmost' among the publishers."

The publishers' attack was led by Elisha Hanson, counsel for the A. N. P. A., who contended the purpose of the agreement was to set up with NRA sanction a "monopoly in the manufacture and sale of newsprint paper for use in the United States, and to obtain for the monopoly absolute power over the price to be extracted from consumers of newsprint paper."

Hanson's chief criticism was on legal ground. He contended the price agreement was in violation of the antitrust laws and also of the antimonopoly clause of the industrial recovery act. He predicted that if NRA approved the agreement the court would break it.

Cites Cut Price to British.

Paul Patterson, Cleveland attorney for the Scripps-Howard newspapers, seconded Hanson's arguments and recorded particular opposition to the proposal for maintenance of a delivered price. He contended the Canadian mills were selling newsprint in South America at a price which netted only $20 at the mills and said NRA before approving this agreement should investigate exports from Canada to Great Britain and Australia at lower prices than are available to United States publishers. He contended that fixing the price at $41 would merely give the Canadians opportunity to load on to this country the cost of financing cheap sale elsewhere.

Charles R. Butler, president of the Inland Daily Press Association, testified to protests from small dailies in Indiana, Wisconsin, Missouri, Nebraska and southern Illinois.

The meeting was adjourned indefinitely to allow NRA to consider arguments and decide on policy.

10 Experts to Aid Morgenthau In Control of Dollar Approved

Employment of 10 $10,000-a-year men by the Treasury, to serve as expert counsel in administering the new $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, was approved yesterday by the House Ways and Means Committee.

At the same time, Prof. Irving Fisher, of Yale, was making a plea before the House Banking Committee for employment of specialists to handle stabilization and currency management.

Favoring the Goldsborough bill to set up a permanent monetary authority to control dollar values, the Yale University economist pointed out advantages of a more powerful advisory body than the Treasury proposed.

Action by the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday, if concurred in by Congress, will allow more scope in hiring Treasury aids than the present $8,000 limitation.

Prof. Fisher told the Banking Committee that "we need to build for the long run, and we can not expect that all future Presidents and Secretaries of the Treasury will be as well fitted for such a special function as are President Roosevelt and Secretary Morgenthau."

He assailed the Federal Reserve Board as "tried and found wanting," and declared "it will be lucky if it escapes destruction altogether."

He declared there is a possibility under the present law "that the bankers and the President might wage a war."

"If the bankers should attempt to dump the securities they hold, it would be difficult for the President to counteract the deflationary influence of such action," he said.

Battle for Mail Contract "Pie" Told Senators

How Million in United Aircraft Stock Grew to Seven Aired.

By Martha Dalrymple.

After hearing how the National City Co., of New York, rolled up a profit of $6,000,000 in underwriting United Aircraft Transport stock, Senate mail contract investigators learned yesterday that steamship companies vied with one another to get what they called the "pie" of Government subsidy in the form of ocean mail contracts.

Reading into the record the transcript of a meeting of a special interdepartmental committee appointed to investigate mail contracts, Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, got some good laughs as he repeated outspoken comments of various departmental representatives.

A. Lane Cricher, former chief of transportation in the Department of Commerce and a member of the interdepartmental committee, explained that most of the remarks were intended to be facetious. One of the Senators remarked that in many of the cases the humor was "not so good."

Questioned about the attempt of the Philadelphia Mail Steamship Co., a subsidiary of the Pennsylvania Railroad, to obtain a mail contract, Cricher could remember few details of the committee's discussions except that he voted against it.

Plan Speeded Under Hoover Rule.

Black pointed out that the meeting took place in January, 1933, and read evidence that former Postmaster General Brown had urged that the committee make its recommendation before February 11 last so that the contract could be awarded before the Republican Administration went out of office on March 4.

The United States Lines, controlled by the International Mercantile Marine, was to sell the proposed Philadelphia Line four vessels for $40,000 more than they had paid for them to the Shipping Board. The I. M. M. was also to get one-third of the new company. It was for this reason, said Cricher, that he opposed the scheme.

The interdepartmental report also produced evidence that the United Fruit Co. received three mail awards so that the Columbia Steamship Co. could get its one contract uncontested. The record also showed that former Assistant Postmaster General Glover suggested that the advertisement for bids contain such specifications as the Columbia Line could fill.

Feared United Fruit "Bugaboo."

"If the United Fruit doesn't get its contracts, it will be a bugaboo for us all until it does," Glover is quoted as remarking. "The United Fruit wants some of the money that's going around."

Joseph P. Ripley, vice president of the National City Co., revealed details of the financing United Aircraft Transport by his company. Four companies Boeing Transport, Boeing Airplanes Co., Chance Voght and Pratt & Whitney Co. merged to form the large holding company now known as United Aircraft Transport.

He said $14,000,000 was realized from the sale of stock, on which the National City Co. realized a profit of nearly $6,000 000 from 1928 until 1930. Since 1930, he testified, the company has suffered heavy losses in United stock operations.

Preferred stock was offered to a selected list of clients, although most of the common was sold to the public.

One Million Grew to Seven.

Ripley estimated that shortly after the organization of United its market value was $138,000,000.

Pressed by Black for an opinion on the ethics of a $7,000,000 profit by Pratt and Whitney three years after an initial investment of $1,000,000, Ripley said he, as a financier, was not concerned with the original investment, but with the current value of the company.

Black introduced an agreement signed by Frederick B. Rentscler, former United official, and George F. Mead, in which they promised not to sell their stock in the holding company for less than $90 within three months. At the time of the agreement the stock was selling for $30.

Ripley vigorously denied that this agreement was for the purpose of forcing the market price up, but said it was designed to retain the services of the two men.

William MacCracken, former head of aeronautics in the Department of Commerce, will appear today before the committee to hear its decision on whether he can claim the right of "privilege" for correspondence which he has refused to turn over to the investigators.

Gulls Feast on Fish Blasted From Harbor

Miami, Fla. (AP).—The sea gulls, no doubt, wish the deepening of Miami harbor would go on forever, for it has given them a big feast.

Each dynamite blast set off to dislodge submerged rocks killed scores of fish and the gulls wasted no time in learning how their banquet was spread.

They parked themselves on the nearest dock, buoy or jetty and with each geyser thrown up by the explosion, swarmed toward it and the mass of dead fish floating to the surface.

Boycott Holds No Fear For Manchukuo Premier

Hsinching, Manchuria (AP).—Cheng Hsiao-Hsu, Prime Minister of Manchukuo, is completely indifferent to any economic blockade which the outside world may impose against his country and Japan.

"Japan and Manchukuo can exchange products, and there need be no fear of an international commercial boycott," he says

Insull Is Given Another Stay

Medical Men Will Decide Tomorrow If Fugitive Is Able to Travel.

Athens, Feb. 1 (AP).—Samuel Insull will have another official medical examination, the minister of interior decided tonight, before the question of his expulsion from Greece is settled definitely.

Two well-known pathologists, Prof. Bensis and Prof. Livieratos, of Athens University, were chosen to visit the much-examined former Chicago utilities operator Saturday and to determine whether Insull is able to travel.

"Pending their report," the minister said, "Insull may remain tranquilly in Greece."

Insull's private physician, Dr. Voylass, issued a bulletin tonight in which he said the 74-year-old man "is still sick; I still maintain he is too sick to travel."

The reinstatement of Insull's American passport today cleared up a moot point in his case, but the status of his appeal from an expulsion order remained uncertain because the cabinet failed to act on it.

An order from Washington rescinding an earlier cancellation of the passport enabled the United States Legation to notify the foreign office that the former Chicago utilities operator's traveling papers were good.

Dollar Cut Booms Stocks and Bonds

discount rate—the rate at which member banks may borrow—to 1½ per cent from 2 per cent. The new rate is the lowest in the history of the Reserve system, and has previously been in effect but once, which was for a few months in the summer and early autumn of 1931.

It is hoped that the lower rate will have a marked psychological effect upon credit costs generally, and will thus tend to improve the market for long-term bonds. In one important banking quarter, the rate reduction was explained as a step to promote an eventual shifting of financing from Government expenditure to private expenditure.

The reduction in the New York bank rate was also viewed as a friendly gesture to London and Paris, tending to dissipate any impression that the American banking authorities are hopeful of attracting all of the gold in the world with the low valuation of the dollar.

The 1½ per cent rate in New York compares with 2 per cent in London, and 2½ per cent in France, and as it affects open market money rate, should make it less attractive to keep short term balances here than in those centers. In that respect, it may serve to put the brakes on a huge flow of funds to New York, which would bring a troublesome amount of gold.

There seemed little doubt, however, that a big gold movement in this direction was starting, with the high premium commanded by the dollar. The first private transaction to be recorded was purchase of $3,500,000 in London by the National City Bank.

Art "Jobs" Pass in Review for Visiting Zoo Critics.

Art work which is being done under the civil works program, at least that part of it going on at the Zoo, received a clean bill of health yesterday after passing before the critical eyes of a group of experts.

There have been veiled and outspoken charges that the output of public works of art projects would be the unesthetic products of unskilled artists and patronage hunters. To date the public schools have not fully cooperated in the scheme. Yesterday a dozen or more critics went out to the Zoo, which is employing more artists than any other local institution, to see for themselves.

Among them were C. Powell Minnigerode and Duncan Phillips, directors of the Corcoran and Phillips galleries, respectively; Edward Bruce, chairman of the committee which advises the Treasury on fine arts; Charles Bittinger, president of the Arts Club of Washington; Dr. Charles Moore, chairman of the Fine Arts Commission; Forbes Watson, technical director of PWAP, and C. Law Watkins, Grant Code and Olin Dows, members of the committee for this region.

Background for Reptiles.

Backgrounds in the reptile house, paintings and drawings of animals, signs which will tell the public what time the various specimens are fed, panels for the lion house—these and other forms of art were "once-overed" by the visitors guided around by Dr. William M. Mann, director of the Zoological Park.

Stringing along were the proud artists. Richard McDermott, who has put the cobras in a Hindu temple; George Payne, whose drawings and paintings of animals won particular admiration; Garnet W. Jex, whom the rattlers can thank for their Arizona desert and the mangrove snake for its swamp.

There were also W. C. Kennedy, who has glorified the cages of boas and American lizards; Klir A. Beck, creator of the wood carvings of polar bears, sea lions and monkeys, which will serve the practical purpose of letting the public know when these creatures are fed, and J. Lee Funk, who was assigned to the chicken snake, among other reptiles.

Tames Lions—On Canvas.

Miss Frances Roberta Boswell, who tames lions—on canvas—told of her work on the panels which will show the distribution of cats throughout the world. Another artist in the group was Raymond Creekmore, who is drawing ants to illustrate a coming monograph by Dr. Mann.

Elie Chevrelange, who is widely known for his animal and marine art, is painting map panels which will depict bird distribution. Stephen Walker, who comes closest of all to the popular conception of how an artist looks and acts, is sculpting a wart hog.

With so many artists thrown together, one might expect an atmosphere charged with temperament.

Jewels That Inspired McGrath Tales Stolen

Syracuse, N. Y. (U.P.).—"The Green Stones," inspiration for some of the best work of the late Harold McGrath, famous author, were stolen, along with many other pieces of jewelry and about $100 in cash, his widow has reported to police.

Green stones were regarded by the dead novelist as talismans and he wove many of his stories around the emerald-shaded jewelry, such as "Drums of Jeopardy," "The Cellini Plaque" and "The Green Stone." Value of the loot was undetermined.

RFC Plans Export Credit For U. S. Trade

Jones, Roosevelt Confer on Proposed Banker Agency.

Creation of a new credit agency within the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to finance American exporters and otherwise facilitate foreign trade is under consideration, Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the RFC, disclosed after a canference with President Roosevelt yesterday.

Also present at the White House were William C. Bullitt, Ambassador to Russia, and John Wiley, who will be counselor to the U. S. Embassy at Moscow. Trade with countries other than Russia, such as certain Balkan and South American states, also was considered, it was said.

"The question is, do we need any facilities and, if so, what," Mr. Jones said. "We discussed the possibility of working out some exchange business with different countries, some swapping or trading arrangements."

No considerable sum of money would be involved, the RFC chairman said, explaining that the object would be to finance exporters as much as to extend credits to other countries. Ambassador Bullitt disclaimed a large part in the discussion, saying he "just listened to Mr. Jones."

CWA Employes Open War on Dallas Rats

Dallas, Tex. (U.P.).—The Pied Piper returned to Dallas, assured the burgomasters this time would give him his due. The piper and 33 of his fellows went to work under the aegis of the Civil Works Administration to assist Dallas housewives to exterminate rats.

The service to the housewives will be free, the workers to be paid from CWA funds. The drive was expected to be beneficial in curbing typhus fever, which Dr. J. W. Bass, city health director, said is carried by rat lice.

Sorrowing Russia Pays Honor To 3 Stratosphere Martyrs

Burial of Young Fliers Will Be in Wall of Kremlin.

Moscow, Feb. 1 (AP).—The bodies of three young Russian balloonists, martyrs to a midwinter exploration of the stratosphere, were brought in scarlet coffins to Moscow tonight to await an honored burial tomorrow.

A battalion of Red army troops stood at rigid attention in the great square facing the Kazan Railroad station, which has cleared of all traffic, as the coffins were transferred from a special train to red and black draped motor trucks piled high with flowers.

A military band, meanwhile, played a funeral dirge. Relatives and close friends of the three men, whose bodies were found in the wreckage of their gondola yesterday, were allowed a few minutes to be alone with the bodies before they were taken to the house of the central executive committee on Red Square.

There they will lie in state until the funeral tomorrow afternoon. The burial will be in the Kremlin Wall facing the square—the resting place of the Nation's heroes.

The victims, members of the Leningrad Civil Aviation Society, were Pavil Fedoseinko, Andrey Vasenko and Ilya Usyskin.

The three men embarked on a stcret ascent Tuesday morning and claimed they had set a new altitude record of 67,585 feet before starting downward.

They were killed in a terrific impact of the balloon in landing. The bag was torn loose and drifted away and scientific instruments were smashed.

On the basis of an amateur radio operator's log investigators expressed the belief that the great sphere was on its way down when it encountered a strong air current that bore the balloon away from comparatively favorable atmospheric conditions near Moscow.

The radio operator said he received the following message between 12:45 and 1:05 p. m. Tuesday: "Attention, Sirius (the balloon's call letters) calling. We now in zone of heavy moisture. We helpless and being covered with ice. We fall downward. Two of my comrades feel very sad. I am ending this message."

In a little improvised workshop, where he began the work as a hobby, he grinds and tempers steel into every conceivable knife shape. To some he attaches handles fashioned from buffalo horns and Jersey and Herford horns. Through Congressman Marvin Jones, Bryant recently sent a beautiful hunting knife to President Roosevelt. The handle was red, white and black, with brass rings separating the colors.

Ickes, McCarl Reach Accord On Slum Plans

Comptroller General Relents, Allowing Purchases for Projects.

An "understanding" that will allow the Public Works housing and slum clearnace program to go ahead with "preliminary work" has been reached between Comptroller General McCarl and Secretary Ickes, the latter announced yesterday.

Ickes, president of the Public Works Emergency Housing Corporation, said McCarl had given his approval to purchase of land on "two or three" projects, and that the program could now proceed through first phases.

Although officials have indicated they were ready to proceed with the Washington slum-and-alley clearance program, as advocated by The Washington Post, Ickes refrained from disclosing what immediate effect the settlement would have on the local situation. Housing officials this week said they were "ready to go" on the local program, but McCarl's objections temporarily laid up the program, along with several millions dollars' worth of other projects.

Adjustments Awaited.

It was felt, however, that as long as permission has been given to go ahead with the National program, final details of the Washington project will be forthcoming shortly.

Ickes stated that "there are two or three matters needing adjustment" which remain undisposed of in the "understanding" he and McCarl reached. However, pending settlement of these matters, he said he would get whatever housing work possible out of the way.

The "understanding," therefore, will partially free the $100,000,000 housing and slum clearance fund, tied up for the last two weeks by refusal of McCarl to approve the corporation form of the housing organization.

Asked whether the plan to have housing built and operated through a corporation would be discarded, Ickes asserted: "If we can function, I don't care whether it is as a corporation or a division of Public Works. I'm not so concerned about details; the main thing is to function."

Placing emphasis on the idea of moving the program forward, Ickes would not discuss to what extent McCarl would have to give specific approval to specific plans, although he did admit that in the "two or three cases" approved McCarl had given specific permission on each project, which involved purchase of land. He stated the "understanding" they had reached would enable the housing division to start construction on projects they have ready.

Bids to Rent Places.

The root of the difficulty between the two officials revolves around the use of a "corporation" as the modus operandi for housing. Without corporation form, with the Government acting directly, Ickes contends it would be necessary to have competitive bidding with sealed bids and formal openings to rent an apartment, with prospective tenants acting as bidders.

Likewise, it would be necessary for a janitor in a housing project to get a Government requisition if he needed a mop or a new broom.

Ickes indicated that the present understanding with McCarl will allow him to go ahead with the building end of the program, leaving details as to operation to be settled later.

"We are near an understanding," Ickes said. He indicated that before questions of operation actually arise, the remaining points raised by McCarl will be settled. It was otherwise indicated that in the end, the housing division of public works will retain the corporation form.

Meanwhile, it can obtain land and go ahead and build.

Cut in Fairfax School Term Seen Unlikely

County Official Reports Funds for Full Year Are Expected.

School officials of Fairfax County, Va., believe that they will be able to operate at least an eight-month school term this session with anticipated local and State revenue, according to a telegram sent State school officials yesterday by W. T. Woodson, county superintendent.

The telegram was in response to an inquiry by State officials asking what additional money would be needed over and above local and State revenues to operate the public schools of the county for an eight-month term without further reduction of teacher salaries.

Woodson, commenting last night upon his telegram, declared there is a possibility the schools will be able to operate a full nine-month term with the revenue anticipated.

The county school board expected at least a 25 per cent cut in State appropriation when the annual budget was prepared for last year, and the State slash was only 5 per cent greater. Woodson said county tax collections were unusually high, making the full nine-month term probable.

He pointed out that the county has gone through the year without reducing teachers' salaries, but had a provision in the teachers' contracts that would permit a reduction in salaries, a shortening of the term, or both. The board has been handicapped, however, because of the necessity of appointing extra teachers not contemplated when the budget was drawn.

Big Michigan Policeman Outgrows All His Jobs

Detroit (U.P.).—The big problem confronting Highland Park police officials is Sergt. Glenn H. Pike, the man who has outgrown every job in the department.

Sergt. Pike weighs 348 pounds, although he was only a 160-pound stripling when he joined the department 19 years ago.

The officer expanded on his job throughout the years and as a desk sergeant at headquarters he broke three swivel chairs in six weeks. He was placed on a beat, but "walked on" ten pounds. Chief Dan Patch transferred him to a radio squad car. There was no room for the squad when Pike answered a call.

In desperation, Patch moved his problem into the identification bureau after engineers had supervised the construction of the bureau chairs.

Idle Men in Library Prepare for Good Jobs

Chicago (U.P.).—In the scholarly quiet of library reading rooms, jobless men are utilizing their idle hours to prepare themselves for better times ahead, according to officials of the Chicago Public Library.

During the past few months, librarians report there is a new spirit evident in these men. They evidently hope the end of hard times is in sight and are studying vocations, the arts, all kinds of craftsmanship and trades with an eye to bettering themselves.

Ducks Fly 1,071 Miles Over Night—By Plane

Dallas, Tex. (U.P.).—Twelve ducks flew from New York to Dallas, 1,071 miles, over night.

They flew, however, in a container of cracked ice aboard a commercial express plane. They were shot in New York State and expressed to B. C. Varner, jr., whose dinner table they eventually graced.

Woodpile Nets Meal In Town of Friendship

A municipal woodpile was established in the rear of a Main street store. A "gentleman of the road" can get a 20-cent meal ticket for a local restaurant for a half hour's work on the pile.

The wood is furnished by the county welfare commissioner and is given to needy persons.

Simple Hymns Hardest For Finest Organists

Boston (U.P.).—Few organists can play a hymn simply and with feeling, according to John W. Farrar, who has been choirmaster at St. Ann's Church, Dorchester, for nearly 54 years.

"They know Bach and Schubert," says he, "but when it comes to a fine old hymn like 'Jesus, Lover of My Soul,' they jerk it out as if it were jazz music."

Vocational School For Lunch Plans

Kitchen Facilities Ordered for District Use.

The Abbott Vocational School Building, at Seventh and O streets northwest, is understood to be favored for the central kitchen for the District school lunch program. The Wisconsin avenue Manual Training School Building, formerly under consideration, will be needed for nursery classes, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, pointed out yesterday.

An order for equipment to fit the central kitchen was placed yesterday with District officials. The equipment will cost $3,940. Supervision of preparation and distribution of the food will be in charge of Mrs. Katherine MacFarland Ansley, of St. Paul, who is due to arrive in Washington Sunday.

D. W. Barnes Funeral To Be Held Tomorrow

Mr. Barnes was a retired carpenter and had lived in Silver Spring more than 30 years. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Hattie H. Barnes; a brother, Henry Barnes, of Sligo, Md., and six daughters and two sons.

Russian Envoy's Wife Finds U. S. 'Better Than Expected'

Mme. Troyanovsky Plans to Study English and Entertain.

The tendency toward increased independence forms a common bond of sympathy between the women of Soviet Russia and the women of the United States, Mme. Alexander Antoniovitch Troyanovsky, wife of the new Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, said at her first conference with newspaperwomen yesterday at the temporary embassy at 1637 Massachusetts avenue northwest. She does not speak English well, so she used an interpreter.

Mme. Troyanovsky expressed appreciation of the welcome she has received from American women, and described the latter as "hospitable and warm." In answer to a question, she said she has not noticed hostility on the part of groups of Americans who objected to the recognition of the Soviet Union and the accrediting of an Ambassador here.

"If such an attitude exists," she said, "I have not been conscious of it. In general, I have found the attitude of the American people friendly to us."

U. S. Better Than Expected.

Mme. Troyanovsky said she had observed an improvement over what she had heard of the United States, but that she will be able to talk on that subject only after she has been here longer. She made an appointment with the newspaperwomen to receive them for a special conference in six months to talk about what she will have learned and observed in this country by that time.

The women of the American press interest the wife of the new Soviet Ambassador, she said. There are many newspaperwomen in Russia, but press conferences are not divided into men and women groups.

The new representatives of the Russian government are to observe the social customs of Washington and conform to the demands of calling and returning calls, and entertaining. Mme. Troyanovsky has already called on members of the Diplomatic Corps.

Awaits Permanent Embassy.

The schedule of receptions and entertaining will not begin until the permanent embassy, the old Imperial Russian Embassy, on Sixteenth street northwest, is ready for occupancy. The wife of the Soviet Ambassador said she has inspected the embassy and found it a very handsome house, but not a convenient one in which to live. The changes necessary will take six weeks.

As soon as she has time, Mme. Troyanovsky will study English more extensively. She had only three months' study of the language when her husband was Ambassador in Japan. She speaks French and Polish and some German and Japanese.

The women of the Soviet Union are dressing better than they did in the years following the revolution, according to Mme. Troyanovsky.

The new chatelaine of the Russian Embassy is a pretty woman with bright brown eyes and waved bobbed hair. She was dressed in an ankle-length dark wine-colored silk dress made on modish lines.

Mme. Troyanovsky was born in Warsaw, Poland, but grew up in Moscow, studying art and music there. She is the daughter of Nikolai Petrovich, who was an officer in the imperial army.

Old Dominion House Passes Dispensary Act

Delegate John Q. Rhodes, Louisa, under which dismissal of pending liquor cases would be mandatory.

Delegate Walter H. Scott, Roanoke, put through an amendment increaseing from two to ten years the maximum penalty which could be imposed on a liquor board employe for bribery.

Senator T. Russell Cather, Winchester, introduced a measure to provide an eight-month minimum term for all public elementary and high schools.

Delegate Hastings Hobson, Chesterfield, advanced a bill to necessitate State establishment of a sanitarium for inebriates. The institution would be restricted to men under 30 and would be financed by liquor profits.

Leaders announced Senate finance committee liquor hearing would begin Tuesday.

Passage by Senate Monday Predicted

Richmond, Feb. 1 (AP).—The State dispensary liquor control bill, which passed the House of Delegates and under which the State will have the exclusive right to sell distilled liquors, and in sealed packages only, will reach the senate tomorrow, and Wilbur C. Hall, sponsor of the bill, predicted its passage there by Monday.

"The bill as it passed the House is entirely satisfactory to me except for one major feature—the limitation of $5,000 placed on the salaries of the three members of the control board," Mr. Hall said after the House action today. "I feel that the House made a great mistake in this and that the Senate should raise the salary to the $7,500 level in the original bill. The control board will be the hub upon which the success of the whole plan depends. It is going to be difficult to find three men of the ability and determination needed who could serve at less than $7,500 each."

At the last minute Vivian Page, of Norfolk, moved to substitute for the bill his own bill for a license system, and, defeated in this, announced that while opposed to the dispensary system, he would join with the majority, and try to make the plan a success.

Delegates Spiers, of Montgomery; Scott, of Roanoke, and Quesenbery, of Augusta, sought to add a section providing for release of all persons heretofore convicted and now confined in prisons and road camps, but this was withdrawn after debate.

The amnesty clause on pending cases does not dismiss those against persons charged with manufacturing liquor.

The two principal objections to the bill by the Governor were removed by the House. The clause prohibiting a local option election within six months and the section to allow the control board to keep its money in banks instead of the State Treasury were stricken out. The House did not provide that one of the three members should be the chairman and charged with responsibility in the selection of lesser personnel, as recommended by the Governor.

The liquor control board will be given very broad powers. It specifically forbids anyone connected with the dispensary system from being interested directly or indirectly in the liquor business, and from accepting anything which could in the slightest degree be considered as a bribe.

A last effort to break the State monopoly was made in an unsuccessful amendment by Vivian Page, who would have permitted clubs to sell all forms of alcoholic beverages to their members. Page said it would merely legalize the present custom and put the clubs on their feet.

Liquor Board Awaits Money To Start Work

President Due to Sign Cash Bill Today; Office Is All Ready.

The signature of President Roosevelt to the joint resolution passed by Congress, providing $36,867 for the administrative expenses of the Liquor Control Board, is the only formality needed to start the board's operations and distribution of application blanks.

Everything is in readiness for George W. Offutt, Mrs. W. Beverly Mason and Isaac Gans to assume their posts. Application forms will be available on the ground floor of the District Building as soon as the President affixes his name. He is expected to approve the resolution today.

CWA workers will be stationed at tables on the ground floor of the District Building to distribute applications, copies of the law and copies of the regulations. After receiving applications, the license seeker will have to pay the license fee to the District collector of taxes, obtaining a duplicate receipt.

Must Picture Premises.

In order to bring the application before the board, the applicant will have to include a duplicate receipt of the tax payment, a picture of the premises for which the license is sought, and the required bond. All applications must be filed by mail.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen said yesterday that the rest of the board's personnel will not be appointed before Monday.

The Commissioners yesterday decided to give the board quarters in the space now occupied in the District Building by the offices of superintendent of insurance. The staff of Superintendent of Insurance Harry L. Davis will be moved to the Ford Building.

None Before Feb. 20.

The board plans to study the fight applications filed, select as many as appear eligible, and prepare legal notices for publication. These must be advertised once a week for two weeks before the board may grant the license. It appeared yesterday that no licenses will be granted before February 20.

Among those who have asked for applications are:

The Square Deal Market, 1420 Seventh street northwest; J. C. Curtin, 224 Four-and-a-half street southwest; C. T. Burke, 1061 L street northwest; E. J. Hall, 1221 E street northwest; Southern Grill, 612 Ninth street northwest; F. Holtzman, 1008 Seventh street northwest; M. House Probes Navy Plane Profiteering going to be held up. If they're making too much we'll put a stop to it."

The committee chairman is not certain that the amendment in his treaty Navy bill, now before the Senate committee, which would require naval contractors to agree not to make more than 10 per cent profit out of their contracts, will suffice.

"It may take additional legislation," he said. "If it does, we'll pass it."

The Senate Naval Committee has indicated that it, too, favors that amendment, but may make some changes in its language, he said.

Also interesting Vinson and the House Committee is the $2,000,000 or more which the Navy may give each year to contractors who are building experimental airplanes.

The special audit shows that contractors spent $2,686,968 last year for work on experimental planes, some of which served as models for big orders. Of that total the Navy donated $1,757,832.

In one instance, a single contractor—developing airplanes he hoped to sell to the Navy—in the 7-year period received $1,757,832 from the Government and spent $929,134 of his own money.

Vinson wonders whether the Governmental donations for such work should not be matched at least dollar for dollar.

Louisiana Goliath Canes David of Press

"Senator, can I ask you a question?" he inquired.

Mr. Long was half way in the automobile but he turned and said: "Get the hell out of here."

Moulden didn't make a move to get the hell out of there, so Mr. Long lifted his cane and whacked him across the shoulder. Alert bodyguards slammed the door of the automobile and it sped away. Arriving on Capital Hill, Long went to the Senate chamber and refused to reply to notes or to come out to the lobby at the request of newspaper men. Seldom has a Senator showed such devotion to the business on the floor. He did not go unpunished however. He had to listen to a lot of speeches.

Long's troubles, it developed yesterday, are not confined to the presence in Washington of the 200 pound Walmsley. The Senate Elections Committee announced it would begin hearings in the next ten days on a petition of Louisiana citizens, asking the removal of Long and his colleague, John P. Overton, from the Senate. The petition alleges both were elected fraudulently.

Prosecutor Kinkead added that if convicted in Minnesota his prison sentence "would be no vacation." "We know how to deal with fellows like him," he asserted.

A request that Sankey be held for Federal authorities of Denver was received in a telegram today from the district attorney at Denver by Dwight H. Green, United States district attorney here. Sankey is wanted there in the Boettcher kidnaping.

Wife Arrested.

Sankey is also under indictment in South Dakota in connection with the Boettcher kidnaping. Byron Payne, assistant United States district attorney at Pierre, said today that his office wanted Sankey brought to South Dakota for prosecution. Boettcher was held for ransom at the Sankey ranch near Gann Valley, S. Dak.

At Gann Valley, S. Dak., the kidnaper's wife, Mrs. Fern Sankey, was placed under arrest and the bond of $5,000, under which she has been at liberty on an indictment for conspiracy in the Boettcher kidnaping, was raised to $25,000.

Group Forming To Make Wine In Albemarle

Grape Growers Organize to Reestablish Big County Industry.

Charlottesville, Feb. 1 (Spl.).—Organization of an Albemarle Grape Growers Association for producing and marketing purposes was begun here yesterday by 40 farmers attending a meeting called by the Albemarle Chamber of Commerce. The organizers of the association also intend to manufacture wine.

Bernard Chamberlain, of Charlottesville, outlined the history of the grape-growing industry in Albermarle and told of the work done by the chamber committee of which he is chairman to reestablish large-scale wine production in the county.

Dr. W. B. Alwood, of Greenwood, formerly a specialist on wine grapes and grape growing for the U. S. Government, said the soils of Albermarle produce the finest wine grapes in America and that the sugar content of the Norton grape is higher here than elsewhere. He estimated this variety would produce 3 tons per acre.

D. A. Tucker, vineyard specialist of V. P. I., attended the assembly and quoted Government figures indicating a recent increase in grape consumption and possible profits from grape culture. He suggested the planting of a limited number of varieties and the raising of table as well as wine grapes.

Other speakers were J. M. Rothwell, E. H. Copenhaver, A. E. McMurdo, T. O. Russow, and L. L. Herron. It was stated that a contract could be secured which would guarantee a minimum of $75 per ton for the Norton and Ives varieties.

Mr. Chamberlain appointed an organization committee of F. E. Merrifield, Mr. Herron, C. T. O'Neill, and Verbon E. Kemp to assist him.

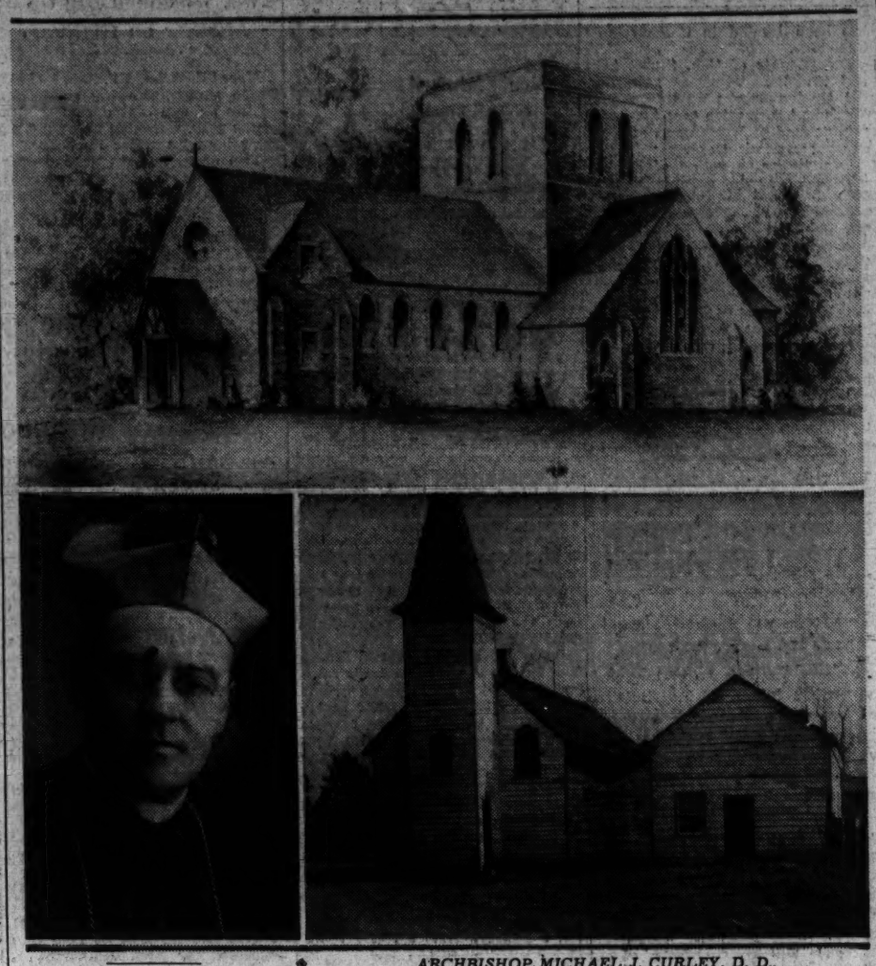
Great Mills Memorial Church Plan Approved; Work on Stone Edifice Will Start This Month



ARCHBISHOP MICHAEL J. CURLEY, D. D., (left) of Baltimore, has just approved the inauguration of a campaign to raise $60,000 for the erection of a tercentenary memorial church at Great Mills, Md. The imposing new memorial (above) will be built in old English Norman style and will replace the present Catholic Church of the Holy Face, a whitewashed frame building (below) 47 years old.

1-Room Store Furnished First Building 50 Years Ago.

By Marion Butler.

Great Mills, Md., Feb. 1 (Spl.). A new page was written yesterday in the history of Great Mills Catholic Church, started half a century ago in a one-room country store, when Archbishop Michael J. Curley, of Baltimore, approved a campaign for $60,000 to erect a tercentenary memorial church here.

The memorial will commemorate the founding of the Catholic Church in the colonies, and the establishing of religious freedom in the New World.

Located near the headwaters of St. Marys River, the new building will stand near the site of the present Church of the Holy Face, which it will replace. It will occupy a large plot of ground adjacent to the Catholic School of the Little Flower, and overlooking the highway leading to St. Marys City, settlement of Maryland's first colonists.

Plans Drawn by Cram.

Through the work of the Baltimore Chapter of the Pilgrims of St. Mary's, the memorial plans have been complete for several years. They were drawn by Ralph Adams Cram, who donated his services as a member of the Calvert Associates of Maryland. They provide for a stone church along typical old English lines, topped by a massive Norman tower. Mr. Cram says he chose this architectural design as the style favored by Leonard Calvert and his band of Maryland founders.

Seating 500 persons, the tercentenary memorial will be the third Catholic Church erected at Great Mills, the site of a great cotton factory in Civil War times. The first was converted out of a tiny general store early in 1880. Known as the Chapel of the Holy Angels, it numbered only 35 members at first. By 1887 the congregation had so increased that the present Church of the Holy Face was built.

Center of Large Mission.

The Rev. Herbert Parker, S. J., pastor, who has been active in advocating the new edifice, says: "Holy Face parish is the center of a mission district of 100 square miles. It is more in need of a new church than any other in this part of the country."

With $6,000 in hand, it is thought work on the new memorial will begin this month. Father Parker hopes its dedication to the Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin will take place in the first summer months, and it will be completed by autumn.

Father Parker has the approval of the archbishop for a bond issue, but it is thought this will not be necessary.

Bridge Bid Sought On W. Virginia Job

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 1 (Spl.). Bids have been asked by the West Virginia State Road Commission for the construction of a bridge and approximately 55 miles of highway and street routes at an estimated cost of $400,000.

The commission announces that the bids will be opened February 13 when they will be submitted to the Federal Government for approval as all the projects are proposed under a Federal grant to provide jobs for needy employment.

The projects include a bridge over Red Creek in Randolph and Tucker Counties of 250-foot eyebeam spans on a concrete substructure; 1.16 miles of concrete paving in Weston; 7.163 miles of grading and stonebasing on the Canvas-Nettie road in Nicholas County; a mile of resurfacing; a relocation of State Route No. 2 in New Martinsville, and .36 of a mile of paving at Sistersville.

'Bias Evidence' Of CWA League Given Probers

West Virginians Testify Claiming Injustices and Hardships.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 1 (Spl.) J. F. Stockton, representing the West Virginia Unemployed League, handed the joint CWA Legislative Investigating Committee here today a stack of affidavits and statements which he said showed "discrimination and bad treatment in every respect."

The league, which has centered its activities in Kanawha County, called a strike a week ago of CWA and PWA workers which officials branded as ineffective.

Among the complaints submitted by Stockton was his own grievance that he was paid 55 cents an hour on a CWA job for which wage scales called for $1.10 an hour. He also said he was "fired" for strike activities.

Senator A. C. Herold (Democrat), of Braxton, the chairman, asked about the size and purposes of the league.

All Members Assessed.

Stockton replied that the league has a membership of 7,000 in Charleston and vicinity; that the local organization is a branch of a National body formed last May, and that "any one who wants a job" can become a member. No initiation fees are charged, he said, but members are assessed five cents a week if employed and one cent a week if jobless. The league stands for "the principles of organized labor," he added, "but is not affiliated with any union."

Asked by Senator Herold why the strike was called, Stockton said it was because CWA officials had "cut off men with seven or eight in their families, leaving single men on the jobs." Some were discharged, he testified, because they were Republicans and others because CWA officials sought to "penalize members of the league."

During the examination a crowd thronged the corridors outside the hearing room, waiting to testify. Included were delegations from different sections of the State. On the stand several told of former good circumstances, of losses of money and homes and of inability to get work.

Chairman Herold said:

"These cases demonstrate the pitiful ones that are suffering. The fellows that never had anything but a dirt floor are living better now than ever before, but the man of once comfortable means is suffering because people think he still has his money and he is too proud to take direct relief."

Graft Rumors Aired.

Senator Earl H. Smith (Democrat), Marion, repeatedly asked witnesses:

"Do you think you could get and keep a CWA job in your county if you let the boss know he could have part of your money?"

Most witnesses so far have replied that they knew nothing definite in this respect, although they had heard talk about such practices. One witness said he heard a merchant tell a needy man, "I'll get you a work order if you deal with me."

Testimony that Government pork intended for relief of distressed families was drawn by several members of the Braxton County CWA clerical staff was given today by witnesses at the CWA legislative probe under way at Sutton.

A special committee of the House of Delegates named to investigate charges of political favoritism and nepotism in the Braxton County CWA management was told by Miss Minnie Cook, clerk in the CWA offices, that she got 9 pounds for herself and 9 pounds for another person. She also said that G. P. Armstrong, stenographer in the office, obtained 9 pounds. J. B. Fox, another clerk, testified that he got 9 pounds and that another clerical employe, whose name he did not recall, also got 9 pounds.

Whether such distribution was illegal was not indicated by delegates, but they seemed much interested in details.

Art and Relic Collector Dies

L. J. Stemple Began Hobby When 3 Years Old; Had Many Visitors.

Rowlesburg, W. Va., Feb. 1 (Spl.). Luther J. Stemple, noted for his collection of 3,000 antiques, objects of art and Indians' relics, died yesterday at his home at Aurora, near here.

The finding of an Indian pipe of peace when he was 3 years old, while roving on the home farm, was the incentive for building the unusual collection, which brought distinguished visitors to the home from all parts of the county. The display filled the entire floor of one wing of the Colonial mansion.

Mr. Stemple was born in Rising Sun Tavern, owned and operated by his father, the late Maj. David Stemple, owned and operated for stage coach travelers on the noted Northwestern grade which ran from Winchester, Va., to Parkersburg, W. Va., on the Ohio River.

An injury received when struck by a falling limb three weeks ago is believed to have hastened his death. The funeral will be held tomorrow.

These films are available from the extension service.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 1 (Spl.).—H. Eugene McCormick, of Inwood, W. Va., who was blinded in one eye and suffered partial loss of vision in the other eye in a collision of his motor car with an automobile driven by Henry Bell, of Winchester, near Winchester last October 20 has filed suit against Bell's estate for $10,000 damages.

Bell was killed in the accident.

McCormick has filed his suit in the Federal court for the Western District of Virginia, at Harrisonburg.

Following the accident, McCormick was arraigned on a technical charge of reckless driving but was freed at a hearing before Magistrate A. J. Tavenner here.

Drunkenness Increasing.

Covington, Va., Feb. 1 (Spl.).—Arrests for drunkenness in Alleghany County have doubled since 3.2 beer was legalized, according to the sheriff's office. In the five months since beer was legalized, 171 arrests were made, as compared with 85 during the previous five-month period. In September, the first month of legal beer, 58 arrests were made, while in July there were only 10.

Third Degree Ban Asked.

Richmond, Feb. 1 (AP).—Spokesmen for the Virginia Bar Association have urged the joint Senate and House Courts of Justice Committee to enact a law making it a criminal offense to procure confessions by force or fear.

The present law merely invalidates a confession obtained by police under duress or threats.

Committee members said they had received numerous letters from police executives and some Commonwealth attorneys protesting against the proposed measure. No one appeared before the committee in opposition, however.

Curtain Call

Man's Own Oration Read at His Funeral.

Oxford, Md., Feb. 1 (AP).—A funeral oration which he had written for himself 22 years ago was read here yesterday at the funeral of Herman Bringman, Oxford grocer.

Mr. Bringman, who broadcast a short-wave radio program each night, was heard to call for help Sunday night and when a physician reached him he was dead of a heart attack.

Among his papers was found the funeral oration and detailed directions for his last rites. He left $100 to pay musicians to furnish music at the services.

At the grave in Oxford Cemetery a band played and a friend read Mr. Bringman's own oration and a last farewell he had written to his friends.

Citizens Fear CWA Home At Brunswick

Protection Asked Against Violence Attributed to Drinking.

Brunswick, Md., Feb. 1 (Spl.).—Alleged drunken brawls among transients housed here by the Civil Works Administration, today caused citizens of this town to petition the town board for Federal police protection.

The brawls, attributed to transient drinking of bootleg whisky, brought considerable unrest among citizens and a special meeting of the mayor and the town council was called last night. The petition for protection was presented at the meeting.

Mayor Harry Mace stated that the town board had decided to attempt to handle the situation with town police before calling on Federal authorities for aid.

Drunks Crowd Jail.

One prominent resident said today that unless the situation is changed he would circulate a petition among the citizens of the town asking the Government to abolish the transient home.

Town officials plan to have several members of each transient group sworn in as officers to preserve peace. Although Frederick County is dry, for several days the jail has been filled to capacity with drunken men.

Four buildings are being used in Brunswick to house transient men. During one brawl a building was damaged considerably before police and two deputy sheriffs could intervene.

11 Given 30 Days in Jail.

At a hearing before Justice Howard Marvin Jones, 11 of the offenders were sentenced to 30 days in jail. While the jail was overcrowded a policeman was summoned to a home where several local youths were causing a disturbance, but he refused to make arrest on the ground that he could handle no more prisoners.

Residents said today that the money paid transients for their labor is being spent for "bootleg" whisky. Some receive orders on Brunswick stores for clothing in lieu of cash. Merchants and town officials said they have found a number of cases where clothing had been traded for whisky.

D. A. R. Will Mark Recently Found Grave of Gen. Stuart

Revolutionary Hero Rests in Congressional Cemetery.

Capt. Wendell Wolfe Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution soon will dedicate a marker at the grave of Gen. Philip Stuart, of Virginia, a distinguished American officer in the Revolutionary War, whose unmarked burial place has been located in Congressional Cemetery.

Descendants of Gen. Stuart here and in the Virginia Tidewater thought the grave was at Annapolis, Md., but information that the noted soldier died in Washington resulted in location of his grave.

Gen. Stuart, a native of Fredericksburg, Va., was commissioned in 1780 to serve under Col. William Washington, a cousin of George Washington.

For many years Gen. Stuart resided in Snow Hill, Upper Marlboro and later Annapolis, Md. He served four terms in Congress.

At the outbreak of the War of 1812 he was commissioned brigadier general of the Fifth Brigade of Maryland troops. Gen. Stuart died in 1830.

Redistricting Bill in Virgina Senate Passes

Measure Given Majority of 37 to 7; House to Vote Next Week.

Richmond, Feb. 1 (AP).—The Senate today passed the Holt Congressional redistricting bill with two committee amendments boosting the population of the Fourth and Eighth Districts.

Passage of the bill—one of the major controversial measures before the session—came suddenly after rough sledding since the General Assembly convened three weeks ago.

As passed by the upper House, the bill provides for district populations as follows: First District, 239,757 (territory unchanged); Second District, 302,715 (unchanged); Third District, 286,064 (previous population, 289,017); Fourth District, 242,184 (previous, 212,952); Fifth District, 271,794 (previous, 251,090); Sixth District, 280,708 (previous 234,662); Seventh District, 241,968 (previous, 176,852); Eighth District, 256,511 (previous, 183,934); Ninth District, 304,320 (previous, 325,024).

Reduces Districts to Nine.

The 1934 Assembly, like the 1932 Assembly, was faced with the problem of reducing the number of the State's congressional districts from 10 to 9, because of a decrease in population under the 1930 census. The 1932 act was declared unconstitutional by the State Supreme Court, because it did not measure up to constitutional requirements for compactness, community of interest, and equality of population.

The bill by Senator Saxon W. Holt, at its third reading was overtaken by opposition that pitched it back into the lap of the privileges and elections committee, which worked on it another week.

Floor Amendments Beaten.

Today it was reported back on the Senate floor in the stage of its second reading. All floor amendments were beaten down, and the bill was carried with a 37 to 7 vote.

The vote was overwhelming enough to carry the bill's emergency clause.

As it passed, the old First and Second districts were left unchanged, despite a fight by Senator Mosely, of Brunswick, to take from the second Southampton County and add it to the fourth.

The old Third District lost Goochland County, which was transferred to the Eighth. To the old Fourth District were added the counties of Cumberland, Buckingham and Appomattox, from the old Tenth. To the old Fifth District was added Wythe County, from the Ninth. The old Sixth District gained Alleghany, Clifton Forge, Botetourt and Craig. All of these came from the old Tenth.

Seven Senators Opposed.

The old Seventh lost to the old Eighth Albemarle, Green, Madison and the City of Charlottesville, and gained Amherst, Augusta, Staunton, Bath, Highland and Rockbridge from the old Tenth. The old Eighth gained from the old Seventh, Albemarle, Charlottesville, Greene and Madison, from the old Tenth Fluvanna, and from the old Third Goochland. The old Ninth lost only Wythe, which went to the Fifth. The old Tenth was split up among the new Fourth, Sixth, Seventh and Eighth.

Those voting against the bill were Senators Cather, Chase, Dickenson, Moseley, Sumate, Thompson and Vaughan.

Those not voting were Senators Robinette, Rogers and Woodson.

The bill now goes to the House Privileges and Elections Committee, and is due on the House floor early next week.

Virginia Bank "Robbery" Nets Just 50 Cents

Danville, Va., Feb. 1 (Spl.).—Rural police officials checked doctors and hospitals today on both sides of the Virginia-Carolina line following the attempt yesterday to rob the Citizens Bank at Virgilina which netted the five men 50 cents according to Cashier Arthur Tuck.

The five men, believed to be equipped with a machine gun and wearing bullet proof vests, are thought to be the same who robbed the bank of Tarboro, N. C., a few hours after escaping from Virgilina. In both cases officers surprised the robbers, exchanged a heavy fire and at both places one of the yeggs was seen being picked up by confederates under fire and placed in a tan sedan which sped away.

The robbery at the Stokesdale, N. C., bank where an undetermined amount of money was stolen, is also attributed to the same robbers. Chief of Police Martin here believes they are professionals playing the "small time circuit."

Officer J. F. Puryear and Detective Britt were looking for a fugitive in a box car near the Virgilina Bank at 2 a. m. when they saw a car drawn up by the rear door. They watched and saw two men enter by a window while others stood guard.

The officers emptied both of their revolvers, reloaded and fired again, 20 shots in all. Puryear says the return fire had the staccato ring of a machine gun. Neither officer was hit. One of the thugs was wounded.

2 Firemen Hurt, Guests Flee, Damage $30,000.

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 1 (Spl.).—Local authorities began an investigation of two explosions which occurred in the Wilva Hotel last night preceding a fire which destroyed the structure. Four guests had narrow escapes and two firemen were injured.

The first explosion apparently occurred in the rear of a store on the ground floor. J. E. Parker, a roomer, was caught on the third floor and had to be taken down a fire ladder. Miss Margaret Jones, C. H. Jones and W. H. Moore, other guests, escaped in their night clothes.

The building is operated by Harry and William Vakos, who also operate a cigar store on the ground floor. The store was deprived of the Blue Eagle for failing to live up to the NRA code. The three-story building is located at Plume and Atlantic streets. The damage done is estimated at $30,000.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at drug stores. ©1931 C. M. Co.

Carroll County CWA Fund Gets 10% Increase

More Men Now Occupied on Projects; Hospital Seeks Loan.

Westminster, Md., Feb. 1 (Spl.).—A 10 per cent increase in the CWA weekly pay roll allotment, which previously had been cut from $9,500 in Carroll County to $5,300, due to the reduction in labor hours, is now effective.

This increase, which adds approximately $500 to the weekly pay roll, has made possible the employment of additional men, bringing the total number of those employed to 590.

The increase in employment has speeded up work on the courthouse, which has been progressing slowly with only a skeleton force. A total of 32 additional men are being employed on this project.

S. L. Thompson, State supervisor of projects, complimented the local committee on progress made and said he had found all projects conform with best requirements.

Charles O. Clemson, chairman of the local CWA committee, requested to be relieved of the detail work in connection with the CWA administration, saying administration work is taking all his time. The committee decided to establish an office here and James Stuart, local CWA engineer, was appointed as coordinator to handle the routine work.

Hospital Seeks $25,000.

Morgantown, W. Va., Feb. 1 (Spl.). The State Advisory Board on Public works announced that the Morgantown City Hospital has applied for a $25,000 loan for constructing an addition and equipping a nurses' training school. Plans were drawn several months ago and much work has been done on the foundation. The hospital is operated by Dr. E. F. Heiskell.

Camp Called Best.

Elkins, W. Va., Feb. 1 (Spl.). Camp Parsons of the CCC at Parsons has been chosen as the best camp of the forest army workers in the northern district of West Virginia, according to official announcement by the headquarters here, which says it will be put in competition with other prize camps of the Fifth Army Corps area.

During the last year, Camp Parsons was under command of Capt. Lester A. Webb, who recently was transferred to Camp Knox, Ky. It is now under command of Lieut Theodore King.

The district title last year was won by Camp Laurel Fork, at Glady, but in the Fort Hayes competition Camp, Wyoming, in the Western District of West Virginia, nosed out the honor. Since that time many improvements have been made in the Parsons Camp, which is adjacent to the Federal forest nursery there.

Mrs. Roe reviewed duties and obligations of parents and teachers, and said the only organization that outranks the parent-teacher association is the church. She said there are three other Rs besides "reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic," and parents and teachers must guard against the "reel, radio and rumble seat." She urged parents, teachers and school executives to use their influence to have the next Legislature ratify the child labor amendment.

Mrs. Coppage emphasized the importance of summer round-up work, a health project among preschool children to correct physical defects among those who will start schooling the following fall.

Mr. Pruitt urged P.-T. A. workers to inform themselves on school affairs. He praised the State for the help it had given the schools, but said further reduction of curtailment of funds on part of the county, particularly in salaries, will reflect unfavorably upon the progress of school children.

Cather Pushes Drive to Bar Virginia Stills

Amendment to Liquor Law to Be Sought; Plan Is Termed "Unfair."

(By Staff Correspondent.)

Richmond, Feb. 1.—A drive for amendment of the liquor-control bill to prevent State operation of distilleries was launched today by Senator T. Russell Cather, Winchester.

Private capital in the great Shenandoah Valley apple counties, he contended, could not hope to successfully compete with the State in manufacturing brandy.

"I'm opposed to the State government entering any business enterprise in competition with private capital, especially where private capital pays a tax to the State," Mr. Cather explained.

"If the liquor bill goes through the Senate as passed by the House, the State probably will operate 40 distilleries. Private interests attempting to compete will be ruined."

Sees Rigid Price Control.

Mr. Cather discredited arguments that the State would be forced to pay exorbitant prices for liquor to be sold in the prospective dispensary chain unless it could at least threaten to make its own whisky.

"If necessary to control prices," Mr. Cather argued, "the State could refuse to buy any liquor until offered at a fair price. It would have the whip hand because no one else could sell whisky in the State."

Winchester would be an ideal location for apple brandy distilleries, Mr. Cather declared, because of its accessibility to the source of supply and its huge cold storage plants, which would permit yearround operations, instead of only a few months as elsewhere.

More than 3,000,000 barrels of apples are produced in the Winchester area annually, he pointed out.

Should the State enter the liquor manufacturing business, he predicted, "there wouldn't be any real saving because it wouldn't operate economically. I never did know the State or the Federal Government to do anything efficiently. They're so geared it can't be done.

U. S. Competition Dangerous.

"Government competition with private industry is becoming more dangerous all the time. I'm told the Federal Government alone is competing with private business in making 246 articles already. That's unfair competition."

Mr. Cather will offer an amendment to prohibit the manufacture by the State when the liquor bill reaches the Senate.

Class Seeks Mile of Pennies To Wipe Out Parsonage Debt

Charles Town, W. Va., Feb. 1 (AP). If all the pennies in Charles Town were laid end to end, especially if they were fastened that way with cardboard strips, it would suit the Gleaners' class of the Methodist Episcopal Church here just fine.

This Sunday school class is attempting to build a "mile of pennies" by providing cardboard strips on each of which 16 pennies can be fastened. These strips are distributed in various stores throughout the town, and bear the inscription, "We are trying to get a mile of pennies—won't you help?"

When the 5,280 feet of 1-cent pieces is completed, it will comprise a total amount of more than $800, which will be used toward retirement of the debt on the church parsonage.

Vox Klaxon; Vox Populi.

American tourists have a way of writing home about Paris taxicab drivers. But most of the correspondence concerns either the reckless piloting or the instruction in colloquial French which accompanies a depression-period tip.

Some day a writer of parts is going to get around to a serious effort on the Third Republic and give the taxicab driver of Paris his proper niche. There was, for instance, that somber day in 1914 when Gen. Gallieni commandeered all the taxicabs of the boulevards, packed them with poilus and sent them out to the Marne to save the capital.

The recent downfall of the Chautemps government, which may be of serious consequence, was in no small degree attributable to the taxicab drivers. They clustered in great numbers around the Madeleine and Opera, loosing a commotion so nerve-racking that no human being, let alone a French Cabinet, could long survive the strain. Yesterday's papers told of another demonstration, another unearthly din from klaxons, in protest against an increase in the gasoline tax. The gods and Monsieur Daladier have not yet decided whether this new revolt shall prevail.

Briand was not far wrong when he considered the Paris taxicab drivers the most typical of Frenchmen. One day, after a speech urging rapprochement with Germany, the newspapers shrieked a demand for his resignation as prime minister and word came that the demand would be echoed in the Chamber. He drove to the Palais Bourbon expecting to face a hostile house. Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, who tells the story, says that as Briand got out of his automobile, 50 or 60 chauffeurs were together in a body. The leader walked up to him and handed him a large bunch of flowers.

"Monsieur le President," said he, "the chauffeurs of France are with you."

Briand's eyes filled with tears. But there and then he knew that when the day was over, he would still be president of the council.

The Pioneers.

Although no one of the feats that he envisioned was achieved, Walter Wellman, who died Wednesday, belonged in the galaxy of adventurous souls who defy death to conquer nature. It was not his imagination that failed. The mechanical equipment of the day was not up to the projects he launched.

In a cigar-shaped dirigible, Wellman tried, almost 30 years ago, a flight over the North Pole from Dane's Island, Spitzbergen, which came to grief when a trailer struck an ice hummock and supplies were lost. Two years later, a similar endeavor ended on an iceberg. Fresh in his mind, as he made the attempts to cross the Pole over which Byrd later flew, was the Andree expedition, which also left Danes Island, in 1897. The bodies of Andree and his companions were found in the frozen Arctic only recently.

Wellman also made a gallant attempt to cross the Atlantic by air. Twenty-four years ago in a crude dirigible he took off from Atlantic City and remained aloft 79 hours. A ship picked him up after his craft, which rose and fell with the expansion and deflation caused by temperature, had to be abandoned.

Men in modern machines have done the things Wellman tried to do. Byrd has planted our flag at both poles and hundreds of persons have crossed the ocean by air. But Wellman was among the pioneers who fired the imagination of the generation which won the glory.

Virginia's Representation.

Virginia's legislators are confronted by a most disagreeable task. When seats in the House of Representatives were reapportioned after the 1930 census, the delegation of that State was reduced from 10 to 9. It was necessary to redistrict, so that all the people might be represented by the smaller number of Congressmen.

Legislative leaders at Richmond saw a chance of increasing the strength of the Democratic party by a little gerrymandering. But the redistricting act which they passed was so unfair to some counties, and so out of line with constitutional provisions, that it was invalidated by the courts. In the 1932 election, therefore, all of Virginia's representatives were chosen at large. Nine Democrats were sent to Washington, in spite of the fact that three of the old districts were represented by Republicans.

Having tasted these fruits, it is difficult for the Legislature at Richmond to bring forth a fair redistricting plan. Several bills have been introduced. One of these measures was passed by the Senate yesterday, after a prolonged dispute. It must still run the gamut of political opposition in the House of Delegates. There perhaps encouragement for delay in the fact that failure to pass a redistricting act before November would again make it necessary to elect representatives at large.

While this game is going forward at Richmond the people of Virginia are represented in Congress by a State delegation instead of Representatives chosen from small contiguous areas. The intimate contacts between Congressmen and citizens of their districts have been, in some cases, broken. And the theory of representative government continues to be distorted by political self-interest.

U. S. Versus The Dollar.

Historians of the future will doubtless chronicle last Wednesday as an outstanding date in both domestic and international history. For on that day the Government of the United States, quietly and as though the proceeding were almost a matter of course, set itself to the task of holding its currency at a level of depreciation for which there is no economic or financial justification. Even for a world jaded by sensational events there is a unique quality in this spectacle of a great nation exerting its full strength to deprive its monetary unit of purchasing power.

Stabilization of the dollar at 59.06 cents is of course only the crowning step in a series of moves which are traceable, step by step, back to the proclamation of the banking holiday last March. The effort to cheapen the dollar in order to raise price levels has been consistent throughout this chain of events. As President Roosevelt observed in his radio address on October 22, "this is a policy and not an expedient." The primary significance of the latest Executive proclamation is found in the decision to set a definite gold value for the dollar, throwing the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund behind the effort to keep our monetary unit from rising above the value set.

The magnitude of this fund is the best indication of the difficulties which will be encountered in holding the dollar at this low level. Almost everyone now realizes that an immediate effect of this stabilization, even though subject to alteration within the 50-60 cent bracket, will be to cause a large influx of capital which fled the country during the period of greater monetary uncertainty. The tendency of these repatriated funds, as well as that of other factors, will be to raise the value of the dollar above the 59.06 cent level. It is to combat this rising tendency that the stabilization fund will be directed.

The amount to which expatriated capital will return is one of the uncertainties which remain to be clarified. The effect of the drain, which may be intensified by a flow of foreign funds seeking a rising American market, on countries still on the gold standard is also yet to be revealed. Reports of banking disturbances in France will not retard the trend. Obviously a flow of capital to this country, starting slowly, might quickly assume proportions which would severely strain the stabilization fund.

The sum of these uncertainties indicates—and indicates very clearly—that the total stimulus to activity here may quickly alter the whole character of the problem with which the Administration has been struggling. Between orderly reflation and inflation of a runaway character the line of demarcation may be difficult to hold.

However great the difficulties in overcoming the depression, at least all interests have been in accord on the desirability of effort to that end. Differences of opinion have revolved around the best way to carry on the fight. There will not be the same degree of unanimity if and when the problem becomes one of fighting a too rapid rise in the volume of business and a too sharp increase in prices.

To these last possibilities, and perhaps they are not merely possibilities, those having the monetary policy of the country in their keeping must now address themselves. Revaluation of the dollar, as it has been handled, has opened a chapter of new problems.

The Anglo-Italian Move.

The proposals for German arms equality put forward simultaneously by Great Britain and Italy are a frank recognition of the impossibility of progress in disarmament without concession to the factors which occasioned Germany's withdrawal from the Geneva conference.

Realists have recognized for a long time that Germany can not be indefinitely denied the right to rearm. The preamble to the fifth article of the Treaty of Versailles states that "In order to render possible the initiation of a general limitation of armaments of all nations," disarmament on the part of Germany is enforced. Here is at least an implied pledge that other nations will move their armaments down the scale to approach the static maximum imposed upon Germany.

That pledge has not been fulfilled. Other armaments have grown, while those of Germany, officially at least, have remained at the level imposed upon her. England and Italy have now stated, with greater clarity than ever before, their recognition of the juridical and moral force behind Germany's contention for equality. The declarations of Sir John Simon and Signor Mussolini recognize that Hitler came to power in Germany largely because of the attempt to hold that country in a permanent subjection never before attempted in any modern treaty of peace. Had Stresemann and Bruening been granted a few more diplomatic victories at Geneva, the Nazis perhaps would not have been so easily able to capitalize the "national humiliation" embodied in a permanently unilateral disarmament program.

Wisdom after the event now suggests that the rational procedure is to draw Germany into an agreement which, while making concessions, will at the same time bind her to observance and provide sanctions for nonobservance which do not now exist, or are ineffectual. With a new treaty, subscribed to by Germany of her own free will, other nations will have an unquestionable right to exercise at least a measure of restraint.

The proposals put a difficult question up to France. In the past she has insisted strongly upon a greater assurance of security before permitting German rearming. The conference reached one impasse upon the French demand for consultation and England's refusal to consult. When Mussolini dismissed the French demand for security with the intimation that France now had all the security she needed, Sir John Simon abandoned the English position of refusing to consult. Thus, very slowly, the situation has worked toward a position where effective compromise is not improbable.

Logs On The Seaway.

Advocates of the St. Lawrence Seaway are making a drive for votes in the Senate, with liberal use of log-rolling methods. The opposition has dwindled, it is said, because Senators who are not in favor of the treaty fear that appropriations for projects within their home States will be withheld if they vote against it. Every one who has observed the working of politics in Washington knows how vital river and harbor projects are to the welfare of those in Congress.

Interests seeking $99,000,000 from the PWA to deepen the Mississippi River are said to be trying to allay any opposition to the St. Lawrence Treaty from Senators representing the Mississippi Valley. By favoring the St. Lawrence advocates they hope to be favored in turn. Senator La Follette told his colleagues on Thursday that the Government is spending more money on the Mississippi and its tributaries than the St. Lawrence project will cost. Of course, the lake States are not complaining about this vast outlay in the river States, the Senator said, but in return they do ask for "just consideration" of the seaway.

The practice of trading votes on regional projects is thoroughly obnoxious. When an undertaking of such vital importance as the St. Lawrence Seaway is involved, this sort of a vote-rousing drive is also fraught with grave dangers.

Numerous issues of far-reaching importance ought to be decided before the Senate places a stamp of approval on the St. Lawrence Treaty. Since American wheat exports have dwindled to a small volume, most of which is shipped from Pacific ports with the aid of a Federal subsidy, the need for development of a ship canal between the Great Lakes and the Atlantic is today less apparent than ever before. Some interests in the Middle West claim that the proposed seaway would give Canadian farmers still greater advantages over our wheat growers than they now possess.

Those opposing the measure assert further that thereby the United States would lose its exclusive sovereignty over Lake Michigan under the treaty. At no point is this lake nearer than 50 miles to the Canadian border. Shall it now be designated an international body of water? The treaty would forbid the United States Government, an agent of the people, is to profit by at least 40 per cent—a far greater additional sum if the Government exercises its privilege under existing law of issuing additional monetary notes based on the enhanced value of the gold we now possess and that we may acquire from Federal Reserve forces.

Who, then, is to be credited with the loss of at least 40 per cent? Will Prof. Warren, the genius back of the "commodity dollar"; Prof. Fisher, who knows those who "know money"; or our priest radio authority on money and economics and such, supply the answer to this very proper request? Again is it to be the "forgotten man" who is to be the "goat"? E. C. JONES.

Science Frustrated.

Measurements by Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, of the Smithsonian Institution, and other anthropologists cast doubt upon the age-old assumption that a high forehead is an indication of intelligence. Recent studies, according to the Journal of the American Medical Association, included 510 "Old Americans" whose ancestors have lived in this country for at least three generations; 118 "Old-Americans" from the highlands of northeastern Tennessee (an extremely backward group), and 25 "Old Americans" who are members of the National Academy of Sciences (presumably a very advanced group).

Only negligible differences were found between the average height of forehead in these four groups. Other studies were made of the foreheads of Indians, American Negroes, "Old Americans" and Alaskan Eskimos. And lo, the Eskimo came out on the top of the list. "Considering the character of the groups," says the Journal, "the data show the fallacy of the idea that a high forehead in general indicates a high intellectuality."

It appears, however, that the study is not 100 per cent conclusive. The scientists found great difficulty in selecting "reference points from which to make measurements." Dr. Hrdlicka worked out a rather elaborate formula—"the difference between the chin-nasion (sic) height and the distance between the chin and the center of the arch of the hair line." But this may have been a discrimination against the intelligentsia. Only 57 members of the National Academy of Science, it seems, could qualify for measurement. Apparently all the others were willing to serve the ends of science, but alas, 118 foreheads in this group defied all measurement because of the complete absence of any hair line.

Who Will Be the "Goat?"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As one outside the 19 who, according to Prof. Irving Fisher, "know money," I may be pardoned for being in a complete daze following the latest monetary exploit of our honored President.

Devaluation of the dollar by 40 per cent is expected to result in a profit of at least 40 per cent to the Government.

Logic informs us that a profit to one party must result in a corresponding loss to some other party or parties. It is conceded that the United States Government, an agent of the people, is to profit by at least 40 per cent—a far greater additional sum if the Government exercises its privilege under existing law of issuing additional monetary notes based on the enhanced value of the gold we now possess and that we may acquire from Federal Reserve forces.

Who, then, is to be credited with the loss of at least 40 per cent? Will Prof. Warren, the genius back of the "commodity dollar"; Prof. Fisher, who knows those who "know money"; or our priest radio authority on money and economics and such, supply the answer to this very proper request? Again is it to be the "forgotten man" who is to be the "goat"? E. C. JONES.

The "Meal Ticket."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is pitiful indeed to see so many young men doing their very best in their endeavor to please some lady with whom they are in love. Countess Karolyi sums this matter up very nicely, as follows: "The American man will have to discover that, in order to gain the love of a woman, he should never try to deserve it; he should rather make her do things for him. The American will have to learn that love in general has nothing to do with merit. Gratitude is not love, and a woman who really loves has a yearning to give, forgive and sacrifice."

In this connection, it is even more pitiful to see so many hard-working American husbands exert every effort (even overdoing it) to retain the love of their disinterested spouses. The undeniable truth is that the ordinary wife quickly loses all interest in her husband. She exists mainly for her offspring. In her heart she feels it is her duty to show a more vital interest in the affairs of her children than in the affairs of her husband. This being the case, the average American husband is a sadly neglected man—a meal ticket and a back number.

It is this state of affairs which produces so much discord in American marital life.

PHILIP EBERT.

"Unrighteous Decrees."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Woe unto them that decree unrighteous decrees!" The decalogue is a constitution filled with the fear of God. We have a Constitution filled with the fear of man. Both these fears are being amply justified by recent events.

Our Congress, at great expense, has been busy enacting felonies into law.

To convert pledged property into money for your own use is a felony. The gold in the Federal Reserve Bank has been pledged to all holders of Reserve Bank notes. It is not the property of the bank or the Treasury, nor can it justly be made so. DR. S. P. KNIGHT.

For Open Hearings.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Optimistic rumors have indicated that the original economy legislation was railroaded through Congress with hardly a semblance of a hearing and that the Government employes were knifed to the hilt. Rumors now become less optimistic every day. In the meantime, the Senate Committee on Appropriations holds closed hearings that bode no good for Government employes. What is happening to democracy anyway? Is such a procedure compatible with democratic Government? And are you newspapers going to stand idly by while dictatorship creeps relentlessly upon us?

Those hearings should and must be open! "INDIGNANT."

Opposed to Birth Control.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since coming to Washington in September I have read The Post from beginning to end, enjoying most of its features and well-written news. As a rule, Post editorials are not always up to standard and one on January 15, is so far below any "standard" that I can not refrain from commenting upon it. I refer to "The Growth of Opinion," an appalling sort of thing that puts The Post on record as favoring birth control because it has something "intellectual" about it!

It is a very simple matter for some 500 society women to get up a series of meetings destined to "save" the poor devils of the lower class from their own folly. But don't you think it is about time the upper crust checked over its own books? Who are they to say what class should produce children when, as a humorist put it, "Who's Who in America will have to print a penitentiary supplement this year to take care of those who are no longer at home." If chronic criminality, loose living, decadent morals and antisocial conduct are to be cured by birth control, I, for one, am certainly willing to allow the so-called "better class" to legislate itself out of existence and give us who still believe in what are known as "old-fashioned ideas" a chance to live as we think the Creator meant us to live.

In addition, I am just about fed up on those who sneer at motherhood, who measure every gift of God in dollars and cents, who make an economic question out of every emotion that was given to us with our souls. I am sick and tired of "social workers" who practice fraud on feebleminded people "for the good of society." I am disgusted with a public attitude that designates people of Mrs. Sanger's type as "high-minded and forward-looking." All the New Deals in the world will never bring blessings on this country as long as our supposedly "best people," society ministers and leading physicians advocate practices that are an insult to God and a curse on the love of husband and wife. And all the above things being true, I am practically certain that not a single one of the people for whom they are intended want to hear them! Because they might have to admit that they are wrong!

D. C. Colored Golf Course.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some time ago there was something said about building a golf course for the colored people of Washington. Since that time we have heard and seen nothing of it.

We hope that we will be able through the cooperation of this paper to get this matter to the Director of the CWA or the PWA.

The only place that we have is a nine-hole layout west of the Lincoln Memorial, which is far from being a golf course. Since Constitution avenue has been widened it has made this place almost unplayable.

Last year we spent more than $1,500 going out of town to play golf on real golf courses. Some of us went as far as Chicago, Ill.

HERBERT BETHEA.

Replying for H. W. S.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A letter to The Post of January 22, signed C. B. R., states that he has read with "amusement and amazement" a letter in the issue of January 6, signed H. W. S. (wife of a veteran), in which she writes of the hardship caused by the loss of her husband's pension and the impossibility of meeting payments on "deferred obligations." C. B. R. asks her to explain what is meant by deferred obligations and goes on to say, "If pensioners have assumed obligations for Uncle Sam to assume through the payment of pensions should they not blame their own judgment instead of the Government?" As the Government has been granting veterans pensions ever since the Revolutionary War and, up to last March, a pension once granted continued for life unless the claim was found to be fraudulent, the veteran's mistake seems to have been not so much lack of good judgment as a misplaced confidence in the good faith of his Government. With this in mind it would seem that a veteran (a typical illustration of a deferred obligation) was amply justified in buying a little home and arranging to use the pension to meet the payments as they fell due. In a nutshell this veteran's deferred obligation meant arranging to make certain payments with money awarded by the Government which the veteran had every right to believe would continue for life. I offer an apology to H. W. S. for answering a question addressed to her and hope she will make answer herself. E. V. H.

Answering Mr. Lanier.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Alexander Sidney Lanier, in his humble way, confesses he has been warning the people of this country of the probability of war with Japan. He seems pleased with himself to note that he has been doing so for 25 years!

Those who have memories extending back over three decades recall the dire alarms perennially preached by that military hero, Richmond Pierson Hobson. War with Japan might come any day—his constant cry. It appears that Mr. Lanier now succeeds Richmond Pierson as the doleful prophesier.

The recent outburst seemed to be due to the fact that some fanatical and war-bent Japanese insisted that Col. Lindbergh flew over Japan as a spy; that another flier left Japan and returned after such a brief flight as to arouse suspicion—therefore, war.

Seriously considered, what is there in the present situation to lead any one to presume that Japan is preparing to make war on the United States?

Japan is familiar with our military history. She may know that we have never been prepared for war; she must be equally familiar with the fact that we never lost a war. She is aware that another and stronger empire island twice attacked us, and under more auspicious conditions, and both times failed. The distance alone, with present methods of communication, is forbidding and holds no promise but fatality.

Japan may wish to expand; she may need more territory and is now, in fact, acquiring it; she is aware that there is not a foot of ground within the limits of the United States proper she could possibly obtain; she understands and appreciates our relation to the Philippines and knows that we have no desire for the permanent possession of these islands.

There is another reason that alone may well dispel all fear of attack from Japan. This rests in the fact that thousands—many thousands—of her people have found comfort, employment and prosperous homes on our shores and within our domains. We saw fit to refuse them citizenship, but they are here, and here to remain, and others will come as fast as our immigration laws will permit.

Carlisle Bargeron

IT seems mighty strange to me that although Huey Long's pugilistic record with other people is exactly 100 per cent defeat, with newspapermen it is 100 per cent victory. I am not complaining that the young man of the News who encountered Huey's wrath and walking cane yesterday did not do all that could be done to uphold the pugilistic dignity of our profession. My information, in fact, is that he did not have a chance.

BARGERON.

But professional pride comes to the fore when I see the situation as it stacks up; every newspaperman losing his encounter with the Kingfish and the Kingfish losing in his encounters with everybody else. It suggests that Huey has the Indian sign on us, that we are the only ones he can beat.

Huey, if you will recall, once beat up a reporter in New Orleans. That was one of his first exploits of which we heard. He basked in the glory of that victory, too, until he went to a club in Sands Point, N. Y. There he himself was socked in the jaw. That prompted a careful check of his record which disclosed that with non-newspaper men it was an unbroken series of losses.

For that matter, what do we see in this particular instance? Mayor Walmsley, of New Orleans, has been here for two days with the avowed intention of socking the Kingfish in the snoot the first time he runs into him. And strangely enough, although he and Huey are living in the same hotel Huey, at the time this is written, has not run into him. I am confident, too, that this situation will obtain overnight.

I don't think it will do us any good to try to explain the situation away. The story at the time he beat up the reporter in New Orleans was that he had two of his bodyguard hold the reporter while he did so. And this time, the story is that he was attended by a bodyguard and did not strike the reporter until he had got into his car. It is not a matter of why these things happen, why the reporters furnish Huey his only victories. The fact remains that they do.

In this case it has been suggested that Huey may very well have been practicing up in his footwork for an unavoidable encounter with Mayor Walmsley and that explained his quick walk out of the hotel and the jump into his car.

• • • •

Frankly, I find it difficult to criticize his conduct on any ground, the hitting of the reporter or his quick driving away in his car. The fact is that Huey must be in a terrible state of mind. Anyone who has known fear, particularly unseen fear, should know how he must feel.

At any time a man who has announced he intends to sock him may bob up in the corridor, in the hotel lobby or from around the corner somewhere I can see how, with this threat hanging over him for two days, Huey may not feel safe even in the Senate chamber. Suppose Walmsley were to bob up from beneath the Senator's seat. Why, it is like the unseen submarine menace of the war. Just a little contemplation of Walmsley by Huey might make an imagination such as his go clean wild. I'll bet if someone were to stick an empty envelope under his door he, like the fellow in Edgar Allen Poe's Gold Bug, would suffer a slow death.

And it is solely the unseen aspect of this danger that is responsible for Huey's state. If he ever sees Walmsley—in time—nothing will happen at all. It is the possibility that he won't see him in time, that makes Huey jumpety.

The Most Exciting Book.

I think the most exciting book I ever read might be difficult to name, when I remember Stevenson's "Treasure Island" and his "The Beach of Falesa" and Dumas' "The Three Musketeers." But I am sure I never read a book that held my attention more closely, from first word to last, than "The Wings of the Morning," by the late Louis Tracy. Mr. Tracy was an Englishman, who died only a few years ago. He wrote a large number of clever detective stories, but his masterpiece of continuous thrills was certainly "The Wings of the Morning," the title taken from the 139th Psalm, and the story well illustrating its significance.

It was, of course, later produced in the motion pictures with William Farnum, and only a year or two ago was reissued in a handsomely printed volume with many illustrations. I have never known any reader who failed to enjoy it. The book first appeared about 30 years ago.

The story opens in the dining saloon of a steamer in the Far East—there is a fearful shipwreck in the first chapter, described with immense gusto. Only two persons are saved—a youngish, athletic man, and a ravishingly beautiful girl. They are thrown ashore on a desert island, and you can guess the eventual outcome.

But before the final return to civilization and the wedding bells, there are blood-curdling adventures. The man's prolonged fight with the devilfish is alone worth the price of admission, but that is only one of many narrow escapes.

No End of Books

The Great Jan.

However much the late Charles Phillips wanted to convey to us the glorious genius of Ignace Jan Paderewski, he did us also something of a disservice by piling on the adulation too thick. Like truth, genius is often uncomfortable to look upon. Surely it takes no uncommon knowledge to realize the ordinary human reaction to essences of perfection, and skillfully to allow for it and hence quiet it—that the subject of a laudatory biography stands deserving of utter praise, but makes the matter so much the more delicate.

Obviously, then, it proves one more triumph of M. Paderewski that he moves unscathed (and hard going it was at times) through this "trial by flattery," "Paderewski: The Story of a Modern Immortal" (Macmillan, $4). I am not yet accustomed to the easy hyperbole of the run of newspaper musical critics—a style which marks this book. Indeed, chapter upon chapter are made up of critical clippings from Dan to Beersheba, and take on an interest rather alien to the appreciation of M. Paderewski. Nor am I pleased to read such grandiloquent analogies as this: "When Paderewski plays he speaks the language of Heaven," derived gracefully enough from the thesis that music is "the language of man's spiritual origin, of the far-off homeland of his soul." But I leave it as a matter of taste, not caring to tread upon theology or esthetics.

* * * *

When once these detractions have been noted and discounted, the rest is amazingly good. Phillips, San Francisco editor, member of the American Red Cross in Poland, late professor at Notre Dame, found the book a labor of love. It is full, orderly and cumulative, written at least up to the hilt of eloquence, ranging from the "intense inane" of expressing musical emotion in words to a far from unmoving narration of Paderewski's sterling humanity.

Diverse as we are likely to think the musical and political careers of the great Pole, I believe Phillips is perfectly just when he states that "his ultimate characteristic is his balance, a large human balance which has in it no trace of the erratic." That balance was hard won. As a boy of 3 in the Russian-ruled Province of Podolia he saw his father carried off to prison and the village burned by ruthless Cossacks. Beginning to study music at the age of 6, he was to devote himself the rest of his life (save for the period of his premiership) to daily work at the piano lasting from 3 to 17 hours—a self-discipline all but incredible. He married for love at 19, and the young couple lived in one room on the proceeds of scanty piano lessons at 25 cents an hour. The next year his wife died in child birth, leaving him a son who was never to leave a wheel chair until he died at 19. It was only a few months before that Paderewski had married again.

Yet what the world saw was the golden mane of hair, the frenzied audiences, the plaudits and the fame. Paderewski was the "maestro," "the supreme musician," later on the "savior of Poland." He was "the peer of Leonardo da Vinci." And the world, in its way, was right. Paderewski was all that. Yet if I have not succeeded in implying something greater than that wealth of appraisal, let me add one incident.

He was, in 1930, at the height of his "return career," a reconquering of the piano earned by unimaginably Herculean labors. Someone who knew what that meant asked him: "Would you do that again if you had to? It is appalling to think of the price you have paid and must pay, as long as you live, for your eminence. Has the game proved worth the candle?"

Do not think he answered quickly. Even his flashing mind had to ponder that a moment. Then he said very simply: "I can only tell you this—I've fought some good battles."

* * * *

The ring of those words is matched by but one other message I know of, a passage which states not an achievement but a need. In "The Will to Believe," William James reports the words with which Henry IV greeted the tardy Crillon after a great victory had been gained:

"Hang yourself, brave Crillon! We fought at Arques, and you were not there."

W. Somerset Maugham will write no more of the East, he says in a recent letter to Charles Hanson Towne. "Ah King" brings to a conclusion his essays in fiction of the Orient. He has done everything in this vein that he is inclined to do.

Now he is at his Villa Mauresque in southern France, delving into the life and literature of sixteenth century Spain. When he has completed the work on this material he expects to write a book in the manner of "The Gentleman in the Parlour."

Light Traps and Heavy Drags

They Were All There, at the First Capital Auto Show—"Magnificent . . . in Expensive Woods and Russian Leather."

One-third of a century ago, a "horseless carriage" arrived in Washington from New York City to complete an "overland run" that required 17 hours and 15 minutes, despite the frenzied urgings of its driver. Reaching the National Capital, it became the center of attraction in this city's first automobile show.

Today, amid glories reflected from ultra-modern and stream-lined vehicles now on display, few remember that pioneering gas eater. And the exposition of which it formed a part is lost in the haze of the past.

Washington's first automobile show was held in Convention Hall in 1900. "The interior of the building was draped from floor to ceiling," contemporaneous accounts state, "and this, in connection with the artistic efforts of the various exhibitors, transformed the hall into a veritable fairyland."

A track encircled the hall and on it were demonstrated "the advantages of the various makes, the ease with which they can be handled and the speeds which they can attain." Nightly contests were held to show "the excellence of the several machines in quick response to guidance, in avoiding obstacles and in stopping short."

A bridge from the entrance to the center of the hall spanned the track, enabling visitors "to move with safety as they pass over the swiftly moving vehicles below them."

"Every imaginable variety of automobile is shown, one reviewer of the show stated, "from the light single-seated trap to the heavy six-seated drag."

The Columbia brougham de luxe was cited as a "magnificent piece of work, with its finishings in the most expensive woods and its upholstering of Russia leather."

The climax of the exposition revealed a marked horse show influence. The exhibited cars were paraded around the track, with keen-eyed judges gauging their claims to awards. The parade was led by a machine driven by Lieut. Gen. Miles. It, like all the other contesting vehicles, was heavily laden with decorations. Flags, bunting and yellow chrysanthemums enhanced or concealed its lines of buggy-like beauty.

During the course of the show prospective purchasers were treated to drives around the track, "the whirr of the electric motors mingling with the chug-chug of their gasoline competitors." Steam-powered vehicles were in the minority, but one "steam machine" drew more than its share of attention because it had "the feature of automatic feed of water and fuel from the supply tanks into the boiler and burner."

At the close, exposition authorities announced that "more than 3,000 persons attended in one evening, despite the fact that the doors were not opened until 6 o'clock.

Senate Asks For Roosevelt Rivers Plan

Flood Control Request May Bring Action on St. Lawrence.

(Associated Press.)

Seventeen years of work and the results of almost 300 surveys will be blended into a National flood-control program for President Roosevelt to send to Congress.

The request for the program, sketched in rough form at a White House conference Wednesday, was made formally by the Senate yesterday when it adopted a resolution by Senator Norris (Republican), Nebraska.

The resolution, by its phrasing, gives Mr. Roosevelt opportunity to send to Congress a message embodying his idea of a chain of public power projects stretching across the country. It likewise affords him an opportunity to address himself to Congress on the subject of waterways.

St. Lawrence Prospects.

These two, combined, gave rise to the possibility that he would be given the chance by Congress, itself, to speak again, in even stronger terms, for ratification of the St. Lawrence seaway pact. The St. Lawrence project falls within the domain of both waterways and public power. The efforts of Administration leaders in the Senate to procure treaty ratification to date have been blocked. The impression has prevailed that unless Mr. Roosevelt put pressure on the Senate this phase of his public waterway-power plan would fail.

It was understood the President plans to designate a group, possibly composed of representatives of several Governmental agencies, to draft the plan into final form. Tied into flood control and power development is also the question of irrigating the deserts.

The biggest single project, around which the National flood control plan was expected to be constructed, was put into shape by the Army Board of Engineers about three years ago and involved primarily the Mississippi Valley.

Years of Study.

The Army engineers have conducted for years extensive studies of the big river systems which periodically go on rampage. The majority of the 300 surveys have been made by the engineers, although the Bureau of Reclamation of the Interior Department and the Agriculture Department also have conducted their own studies.

The bulk of this information, already on file on Capitol Hill, is held by the House Committee on Flood Control. Riley J. Wilson, representative of one of the States that has suffered most from floods, Louisiana, is chairman of the committee.

Wilson said yesterday he planned to introduce a resolution similar in purpose to that of Norris.

Brig. Gen. E. A. Miller Dies in Coronado, Calif.

Death of Brig. Gen. Edward A. Miller, retired, one of the Army's World War commanders, in Coronado, Calif., Wednesday, was announced by the War Department here yesterday.

Gen. Miller, a West Point graduate, served through the Philippine insurrection, and during the World War commanded the Fifty-eighth Field Artillery Brigade in the Argonne-Meuse operations November 1 to 6, 1918.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Fanny Miller, of Coronado.

Four Attack and Rob Pedestrian of $120

Attacked by four men as he walked near Fourth and G streets northwest, early yesterday, Elmer Imlay, of 2829 Twenty-seventh street northeast, was beaten and robbed of his billfold containing $120.

Imlay said he met two of the men in a downtown restaurant. They walked with him to Fourth and G streets, he said, and there were joined by two others. Without warning, police were told, the men struck him several times, took his wallet and fled.

Woman's Purse Snatched.

Mrs. Vivian Mason, of 907½ Fifth street northwest, yesterday told police that her pocketbook, containing $11, was snatched by a colored man as she walked near her home.

You Can't Say It With Flowers if You Keep Them Until They Wilt

By Robert Quillen.

Doubtless you have heard the story about two friends, one indebted to the other, who were held up by a gangster. The debtor opened his purse and took from it a $10 bill, which he offered to his friend.

"Here, Bill," said he, "Is that ten I owe you."

You may doubt that anybody ever paid a debt under such circumstances, but the method is employed by many men as they draw near the end of their days.

Though death is common to all creatures, man alone is aware that he must die. Fearing and dreading death, he dreams of another life to follow it. And hope of reward or fear of punishment in that other life is a dominant influence in the life he now has.

Thus knowledge of death controls his life. In youth he fights against his nature; in middle life he fights against habit; in old age he fights against greed.

He usually wins the last fight. A cold breath of warning clears his mind of confused values and he turns his back on life and prepares to die.

It is then that he begins to bargain with death.

"I have been selfish," he confesses, "and I wish to make amends. I will give part of my fortune to a hospital and another part to a school and the remainder to a home for orphans. Surely such generosity will atone for the wrongs I have done and earn for me a kind reception on the other side of death."

But he isn't generous. He isn't giving away anything. Death has already claimed all he has and will take it with or without his consent. He is merely trying to pay a debt with money that he must give up in any case.

It isn't generous to give away something you can no longer use.

"Here, God," man says, "is the last of my life. I have used all of it that was worth anything, but I will trade you the remainder for a better life to come."

There isn't much trading value in a machine that is ready for the scrap pile.

Snell Defends Hoover Policy, Hits Democrats

Not Satisfied With "The Gentleman in White House," He Says.

Republican Leader Bertrand H. Snell yesterday told the House he is "absolutely sure Mr. Hoover would have done a better job" of emergency relief than President Roosevelt, if he had received the same Congressional backing.

"If a Democratic Congress had supported President Hoover with the same patriotism you are now asking us to support President Roosevelt, the situation would have been met," he asserted.

Then for half an hour he parried thrusts of House Democrats, who took issue with his statement that President Hoover "gave the Seventy-second Congress the most complete constructive program of relief ever presented by any President in my time."

Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas, declared Mr. Hoover "had a majority in Congress for 18 months after the panic, and you can't cite one constructive act that the House enacted."

"Public Fraud" Feared.

Representative John J. Cochran (Democrat), Missouri, charged the Hoover Home Loan Bank recommendations "would have worked a fraud on the public."

Representative William B. Oliver (Democrat), Alabama, declared Snell indorsed Fiorello H. LaGuardia for Mayor of New York. He said LaGuardia "was one of the Republicans you are talking about in the last House who voted often with the Democrats and against Mr. Hoover."

"I indorsed Mr. LaGuardia for the primary purpose of defeating Tammany Hall, and we beat you," Snell replied.

The minority leader said President Hoover sent to the Democratic House a comprehensive economy act and reorganization plan, but "your House Expenditures Committee threw it out of the window without hearings."

Chairman Cochran, of the Expenditures Committee, retorted that hearings were held, but "Mr. Hoover was a defeated candidate for reelection when he sent up the plan."

Mr. Snell contended that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, sponsored by Mr. Hoover, "has done more to remedy conditions than any of your other commissions."

Snell Not Satisfied.

He said Mr. Hoover recommended legislation for relief of closed bank depositors, and to free farm and industrial credit "two years in advance of President Roosevelt."

Asked if he were satisfied with the "job" done by the incumbent President, he replied:

"No, I am not altogether satisfied with the gentleman now in the White House."

He added that "when President Roosevelt gets through, the people of the country will be satisfied with the recommendations of President Hoover."

"All you do is apologize for not acting," he declared.

"If you bring in legislation to restore full benefits to veterans with service-connected disabilities, I can assure you every Republican will be for it," he said.

Indiana Prison Swallows Three Dillinger Pals

Michigan City, Ind., Feb. 1 (AP). Indiana's three bad men, tamed in Tucson, had a theatrical homecoming today to the State prison whence they broke loose last September 26 for a four-months' spree of crime and flight.

At 11:10 a. m., the penitentiary gates swung open and across the welcome mat, walking the gauntlet of rows of Michigan City police, strode Harry Pierpont, chief gunbearer of the Dillinger Gang that terrorized the Middle West with bank robberies and jailbreaks; Charles Makley and Russell Clark.

Thirty miles away, in the county jail at Crown Point, languished John Dillinger himself, who had traded escapades with his pals.

Dillinger had beat his gang home from Tucson by plane, and awaited arraignment Friday for killing Policeman Patrick O'Malley, of East Chicago, in the First National Bank robbery.

Pierpont, Clark and Makley will be forwarded soon to Lima, Ohio, to be tried for the murder of Sheriff Jess Sarber.

During the day Warden Louis E. Kunkel, Capt. Leach, Capt. Stege and other officers conferred on a hunt for John Hamilton, Dillinger's pal in leadership of the fugitives. The convicts have said he was fatally wounded in the East Chicago bank robbery, but the officers were skeptical.

Prison officials said the three returned convicts were put in solitary confinement for two or three days. Later they will be quizzed concerning the escape plot of last September, particularly with reference to the whereabouts of Joseph Fox and Joe Burns, two who made the break and have not yet been accounted for.

Dillinger's Father Arrives at Jail

Crown Point, Ind., Feb. 1 (AP). John Dillinger, 74-year-old father of the young bandit who bears his name, arrived at the Lake County Jail this afternoon with Attorney Joseph Ryan, of Indianapolis, to visit his son. The elder Dillinger is a farmer at Mooresville, Ind.

"Guilty Buyer" Liquor Clause Angers House

Senate Blamed in "Joker," as Double Charges Confuse Courts.

While Police Court was trying to untangle a muddled situation yesterday with the arraignment of six defendants on various liquor law violation charges, members of the House denounced a provision of the National liquor revenue act which would prosecute buyers as well as sellers of bootleg.

Disclosure by David A. Hart, assistant United States attorney, that the Federal liquor tax act carries a joker brought repercussions in the House, which had sought to protect the consumer.

Representative Shoemaker (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, denounced both the provision of the law and the assistant United States attorney on the floor of the House. He was joined by Representative Britten (Republican), of Illinois.

House Blames Senate.

House members blamed the Senate for the situation because it struck from the bill the words "for sale."

The provision in question, section 201, title 2, reads: "No person shall (except as provided in section 202) transport, possess, buy, or sell or transfer any distilled spirits, unless * * *" the proper tax stamps are affixed.

Penalty for violation of this provision is five years in prison or $1,000 fine, or both.

The amendment would have inserted the words "for sale" just after the word "buy" in the act.

In Police Court there was considerable confusion when six defendants, arrested under the new District liquor law, were arraigned.

The defendants faced two sets of charges—possession of nontax-paid liquor and selling liquor without a license.

Names of the defendants were called in District court. They failed to answer. Judge John P. McMahon summoned their bondsmen. It was explained the defendants were in United States court awaiting a hearing on the possession counts.

Only 3 Charges Filed.

Then Assistant District Attorney David A. Hart announced that no papers would be issued in the possession cases until the matter of law was clarified.

Although each of the six defendants was charged by police, only three "sale without license" charges were filed in court. They were against Anthony P. Dugan, 29, of 3711 South Dakota avenue southeast; William Bragg, of 438 Eleventh street southwest, and Myra Bragg, of the same address.

In addition to the "sale" charges, police filed possession of non-tax paid liquor counts against Lee R. Denney, of 2115 C street northwest, Frank C. Williams, of Alexandria, and Florence C. Driscoll, of 2314 First street northwest. They were released under bond pending a later hearing.

Ezekiel Favors Dairy Imports

Opposed to Restrictions at Hearing Before Committee.

Extension to all imported dairy products of permit restrictions now imposed on foreign milk and cream yesterday was opposed by Mordecai Ezekiel, economic adviser to the Agriculture Department, at hearings before a House Agriculture subcommittee.

The Henney bill was opposed by Mr. Ezekiel because "it would be considered a discrimination against foreign importers."

The bill would require importers of cheese, butter and other dairy products to get similar permit from the Agriculture Department to the certification required for the last six years for milk and cream, as a health and sanitation measure.

Representative Charles W. Henney (Democrat), Wisconsin, author of the bill, charged that foreign countries have not taken steps against diseases in milk-producing animals. The cheese vat in Switzerland, witnesses charged, is often used for washing contaminated clothes.

Mr. Ezekiel testified the Swiss government has lodged an "oral" protest against the bill. He said the farmers themselves would balk at placing such restrictions on imports.

Treasury Asks More Time on New Tax Bill

Feels $10,000-$30,000 Income Class Is Hit Too Hard.

(Associated Press.)

To make certain that the person whose income is between $10,000 and $30,000 does not have to pay more than his share of the Nation's expenses, the Treasury yesterday asked for more time to study the new tax bill.

The request probably will delay completion of the bill by the Ways and Means Committee. The Treasury will submit a report within the next few days. It is understood the department feels that under the new rates—normal and surtax—incomes between $10,000 and $30,000 will bear more of the burden in proportion to higher incomes.

The committee also has yet to consider some proposed changes with regard to credits to partnerships and to life insurance companies on annuities but the question is so unsettled that committee members declined to make details public.

The committee plans to act today on the recommendation of Postmaster General Farley to continue the first and second class postal rates which expire on July 1. The Postmaster General will send officials to testify regarding the necessity for continuing the present 3-cent first-class rate on intercity mail.

Another proposal to be considered today is that of Representative McClintic (Democrat), Oklahoma, for a retroactive penalty tax on petroleum produced and sold or purchased in violation of State production and Federal tax laws. As tentatively outlined, it provides for a 50 per cent award to informers of sales of such oil.

Secretary Morgenthau's request for ten expert assistants was approved yesterday and it was decided that the new income tax rates should not be retroactive on incomes of 1933, but would apply to those in the calendar year of 1934.

L Street Shop Real Eldorado For Antiquarian

Odd and Delightful Pieces From All Over Globe Are Found There.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

A dime, a dollar, or five hundred dollars are equally in danger of being spent in a delightful little hidden away antique shop on L street. There's something there for every type of home, and every type of person — lovely old furniture and rare antique laces, ancient fans, and unusual pieces of jewelry.

A learned man connected with one of Washington's museums visited the shop the other day and said that some of the pieces should really be in private collections. He simply enthused about some fine South American silver incense burners which he declared were about 300 years old.

One of the most unusual pieces in the shop is a table ornament made of silver placed on brass in the shape of lily leaves and flower buds. These "grow out" of a silver base.

The jewelry cabinet has an amazing number of brooches, earrings, necklaces, and lockets. There's even an odd little perfume ball no bigger than a wild cherry. One of the lockets has an old tintype of a much mustached gentleman, another has the picture of a lovely young girl. It was odd to finger them, to study the faces, and wonder what is the story back of them, who the people are, where they lived, what were their joys and sorrows.

The odd little bouquet holders piqued one's fancy, too. There were four types, American, French, Italian and Russian. One of them not only had the finer rings but little silver legs to stand on. There was a pair of Spanish earrings, each one as large as a person's face. These were worn pinned into the hair, either just back or over the ears.

From under one of the old tables the manager pulled out a large wicker basket filled with antique picture frames. Some were gilt, others walnut and mahogany. There were all sizes and shapes, priced high and low.

Collectors of rare fans would be in a veritable haven here, for there are several very old, very beautiful ones. One of them is a Chinese mandarin fan with mother of pearl spokes. Across the folds is painted a colorful scene of a large gathering. The faces are minute pieces of ivory delicately hand painted and fastened on.

It was impossible to ignore the two quaint "duck" dishes sitting side by side amidst a large display of glassware. These are small bowls with glass tops in the shape of ducks.

The laces are lovely old things. There is a handmade jacket, now quite yellow with age, a beautiful combination of lace and net. Another is black lace. This one was said to have been worn at Lincoln's inaugural ball. Oddly enough, the style is identical to those of the present day. A small lace collar was the epitome of skilled handwork.

An old fire screen was one of the most unusual we had ever seen. It was a large glass square in a wrought iron frame with wrought iron lattice work on it. This in front of the fire wards off the concentrated warmth but allows the cheerful flame to remain in sight.

In all corners of the shop, on the walls, in the table drawers, are all sorts of interesting pieces. Here is one nook well worth a visit.

There's a man with a queer French name who has a positive talent for "making over" furniture. He mends, remodels and refinishes anything that comes his way. Even fragile articles of ornament are safe in his hands.

Chairs or tables which look as though they were straight from the days beyond recall bit by bit drop their piecemeal look and assume a bit of solidity, though retaining their antique appearance.

But it isn't only antiques this remarkable workman knows how to handle. He can take a fairly late piece of furniture and put that mellow look of 50 years ago on it.

A downtown shop has some letter scales, very small, very fragile. A letter which might be too heavy for one stamp, or heavy enough for several often takes us trudging into the postoffice to ascertain the postage. But with letter scales right on hand, we can soon find out and save ourselves no end of trouble.

Employers Vital Factor in Character Building And Graphs Now Help Promote Right Thinking

Two Decades of Research Show Fundamentals That Are Needed.

Employers are the most important factor in character building today. Churches, schools, and even homes are a less compelling force in this work than business concerns, according to Milton Fairchild, chairman of the Character Education Institution, which works with State departments of education throughout the United States.

"Employers, in constantly increasing numbers, are demanding that their workers possess good characters as well as ability," said Mr. Fairchild yesterday at his home, 6313 Conecticut avenue. "They have found that employes are much more valuable to a firm if they are honest, ambitious, and cooperative in addition to being able to do their jobs well."

The fact that business concerns are demanding higher characters from their employes will result in homes and schools taking a more active interest in the character-building program, believes the educator, who has spent 20 years in research on this subject.

Parents Now Can Help.

"In the past, too many parents have failed to realize the importance of proper thinking habits on the part of their sons and daughters," he continued. "This fact is deplorable since more resources are at the parents' command than ever before. As the result of painstaking and expensive research, fathers and mothers can now easily find out the direction in which their children's characters are growing. By filling out character graphs and by checking bad thinking habits, parents can teach the boys and girls to overcome their weaknesses and faults."

Character graphs, built on what Mr. Fairchild designates as the "15 basic civilization virtues," are just as valuable for adults as for children, in the opinion of the head of the Character Education Institution. These graphs, similar to the one illustrated, enable men and women to thoroughly analyze themselves, asserts Mr. Fairchild. If they check their thinking habits they will be able to eliminate some of their bad ones.

Ten Bad Thinking Habits.

The ten bad thinking habits Mr. Fairchild lists as follows: Sloppy, insincere, fantastic, nonsense, sarcastic, emotional, egoistic, chatter, mob and insane.

He defines victims of these habits thus:

Sloppy—Uncertain of facts; unable to draw conclusions; capable of only weak efforts; talks in a rambling fashion.

Insincere—Addicted to deceptions, falsehoods; has concealed selfish interests.

Nonsense—Uses pretentious verbiage; has obscure and loose reasoning.

Sarsactic — Inclined to verbal abuse and ridicule of opponents and their ideas.

Some Due to Heredity.

Chatter—Uncontrolled talkativeness.

Insane—Has ill-formed brain; diseased, narcotic, alcoholic, toxic.

Many of these bad thinking habits are due to heredity, in Mr. Fairchild's opinion, and can not be completely eliminated. But he believes that by persistence they can be reduced to the point where they do not exert a strong influence for evil.

"If a person is born a chatterer, a chatterer he will remain. But, if he realizes early in life that he possesses this fault, he can learn to control it considerably. The same thing holds true for other bad thinking habits. It is important, however, that the person should be taught to recognize his faults while he is young. That gives him a longer time in which to fight against them, and the more he conquers them the better his chance of getting a job with the modern, particular employer," concluded Mr. Fairchild.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Diet in Pregnancy.

A pregnant woman does not need to "eat for two" in the sense the term is generally used. There is no need to eat more than she has done in other periods of her life—at least no more of fats, starches, sugars and proteins. Most adults, including women, overeat, and the margin of a woman's eating is ample to take care of her child's needs when she is childbearing.

So far from suffering from undernutrition, most pregnant women are overnourished.

So much for the rule. There are exceptions. As a rule, pregnant women do not get enough vitamin B foods and, in consequence, they do not have enough milk for the baby when the time comes. They do not get enough iodine and they are prone to develop goiter and to be unduly nervous. They do not get enough lime and phosphorus, and they lose a tooth or two during pregnancy, and occasionally a baby with congenital rickets is born. To increase the prospective milk supply the mother should eat yeasts and whole grain cereals, flours and bran. To get enough iodine she should eat fish caught in salt water. To save her teeth she should eat cheese, milk, butter, greens, salads, whole grain cereals and breads and nuts.

Dr. C. B. Reed reports that a deficiency of lime and phosphorus in the blood is one factor in puerperal convulsions. To prevent this physicians not only advise the lime-phosphorus foods in the daily diet but in emergencies they give lime salts by injection as well as by mouth. They also make use of vitamin D foods and medicines, such as cod liver oil, haliver oil, and viosterol, since it has been proved that this vitamin assists in the absorption of lime and phosphorus and also stabilizes them in the tissues.

Pregnant women not only lose teeth from decay but they are prone to develop gum disorders and occasionally they become scurvied in some degree. To prevent this they should have fruits and vegetables—the fresher the better.

It is well to bear in mind that the same vegetable may vary in its ingredients according to the place of its growth and season. Vegetables grown in certain soils contain considerable iodine and on other soils very little. Dr. Price found variation in the composition of cheese, butter and milk in Switzerland dependent on whether the cows and goats were grazing in the valleys or high up on the mountainside, near the snowline.

Gallows of Chance

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

The Story Thus Far.

Sir Humphrey Rossiter, British home secretary, has refused to reprieve Cecil Brandt, doomed to the gallows for slaying a friend of his wife. Returning to London from a visit in the country, Sir Humphrey is captured by a mysterious band of masked men. The leader tells him he will be hanged unless he grants a reprieve to Brandt. Sir Humphrey is placed on the gallows, hemp rope about his neck. A messenger arrives with word that Brandt's wife is at Rossiter's London home, eager to tell the truth about the shooting to save her husband, who is to die early the next morning.

Rossiter is released. At London, Mrs. Brandt—one of his closest friends—tells him that her husband shot Gervase Benham because of jealousy. Finding his suspicions unjustified, Brandt ordered his wife to preserve silence to shield herself.

Mrs. Brandt departs after Rossiter assures her he will grant a reprieve. As he picks up the telephone to call Wandsworth Prison he faints. When he regains consciousness, hours later, he learns that Brandt has been executed. Mrs. Brandt tells him later she believed her husband was insane and wanted to die. Invited to Sir Humphrey's home for dinner she disappears on the way. Scotland Yard operatives find Rossiter missing when they arrive at his home. In Norfolk County the detectives search in vain for the house of mystery to which Rossiter was whisked on his way to London. Young Detective Pank, taking a room at his uncle's home in Norwich, learns that a mysterious man had lodged with his relatives the night of Sir Humphrey's adventure.

He is convinced that the man was the driver of the rented automobile which Sir Humphrey had used on his way back to London the eve of Brandt's execution. In a bar room he meets an exceedingly ugly man.

The ex-detective welcomed the newcomer with a smile and a cordial good-evening. The latter seemed somewhat surprised, but returned the civilty.

"Shall we make room for you by the fire?" Pank suggested. "The young lady and I will move up a little."

"Very kind of you," the other replied, with a deprecatory wave of the hand. "I have a weakness for bars myself. Later on, if I may, I'll bring a chair up. Come on, Harry," he added, making his way to the small opening. "A pint of stout—and look sharp about it."

For some reason or other the owner of the little haven seemed depressed.

"A pint of stout," he repeated thoughtfully.

"When you drink my stout or when you drink my beer," the publican replied, "either of them are good drinks, but there's one sad point about 'em——"

"And what's that?"

The landlord leaned across the extemporized counter which divided the two rooms and was the only thing which suggested a public house.

"They want paying for," he whispered hoarsely. "Look here, Mr. Humble——"

He unhooked a slate which hung in a recess and tapped with a pencil a certain name with a long list of entries underneath. The name was Humble and the list of drinks consumed was formidable. The owner of the name scowled at the slate.

"All that," he remarked.

Free Drinks Recalled.

"Not to speak of the free drinks you've had," the landlord reminded him.

The landlord looked round the room as though to challenge comment. Ernest Pank met his eye and plunged into the discussion.

"What's all this trouble about a pint of stout?" he asked. "My friend, Mr. Humble, will have it on me."

The latter turned his head. There was something furtive about his expression, as though the sound of his own name had filled him with suspicions.

"How did you know my name?" he inquired.

Ernest Pank smiled. The fact that he had just heard the landlord mention it seemed to have escaped his notice.

"I like that," he exclaimed. "I'm a Norwich man, aren't I? I was down where you used to work, not many days ago. Draw a stout, landlord, and give us another drink each. How's business, Mr. Humble? This is my cousin, Miss Pank."

"And what may your name be?" Mr. Humble asked, not overgraciously.

"Curiously enough," the former detective confided, "my name is Pank, too, same as my cousin's. Plenty of us about the city and all of us more or less related."

"When were you down at the place where I used to work?" Mr. Humble asked, still suspicious.

Desperate Venture.

"Let me see. It must have been six weeks ago. You were just closing down, I believe."

This was a desperate venture, but just then Ernest Pank felt like taking chances.

"Whether we were or whether we were not just closing down," Mr. Humble said with emphasis, "is no business of any stranger's."

"Don't call me a stranger," Ernest Pank begged good-naturedly. "Why, I've known you by sight as a Norwich man for years."

"Well, then, I won't," he consented graciously. "Here's your very good health, Mr. Ernest Pank, and I'm willing enough to be friendly with you and all the world. I might add that I wish our host had a little more confidence in his fellow creatures, and realized that when an artist is temporarily deprived of his occupation he needs sympathy and leniency from any one who wants to call himself a pal."

"You got my sympathy all right, Mr. Humble," the landlord declared, leaning amiably across the counter. "You've always had that, but you've had 26 pints of stout and about the same quantity of beer as well, and some day or other a reckoning would not be so bad."

"Harry!" Ernest Pank expostulated, addressing the landlord. "Harry Chittock, I don't think you quite realize who our friend is. You don't realize his importance."

"Well, as a matter of fact, I don't know much about his job," the landlord agreed. "Not since he came back to these parts, at any rate. He's what I call darned secretive about himself. What I says is I don't care what a man does so long as he behaves and I see the color of his money."

Merely a Loan.

"To show you what I think of Mr. Humble," Ernest Pank continued, thrusting his hands into his pockets, "I'll tell you this, Chittock. If Mr. Humble were to come to me and say, 'I have unfortunately become indebted to this house for a trifle like two or three pounds for necessary refreshment,' I would say —'Mr. Humble, as a Norwich man and an old acquaintance, do me the favor of accepting that sum as a loan.'"

The landlord rubbed his hands. This sort of talk might lead to something. Mr. Humble was too much astonished to indulge in the simplest of gestures. His small, crafty eyes seemed to have disappeared in folds of flesh. His shaggy hair seemed more unkempt than ever.

"Well," the landlord remarked, "there is some in this world fortunately has money to throw away on their friends, and there is some as is born so generous they don't know what to do with it."

Amy clasped her cousin's hand. Wealth like this must not be allowed out of the family.

"Ernest," she insisted, "that clock is slow, and I don't wish to stay here any longer. Please come."

Ernest Pank rose at once to his feet. The man in the gray suit scowled.

"Going off, are you?" he scoffed bitterly. "After all that fine talk!"

"Only to supper," his new friend confided. "This is a hungry city, you know, Mr. Humble. One must eat here as well as drink. This way, my dear.

Pleasant Walk Home.

He opened the door and Amy passed unsuspectingly into the passage. Her cousin touched Mr Humble on the shoulder.

"What about a glass at 10 o'clock this evening?" he whispered. "We could have a little chat then. • • •"

The walk home was pleasant enough. Amy was inclined to be petulant at first, but at the touch of her cousin's arm around her waist she was a different person. They passed underneath an avenue of trees and under every third one they paused for an embrace.

"You are a one for kissing," Amy rallied him, as they emerged into the civilized spaces.

Chapter XI.

SUPPER was a thoroughly enjoyable meal. Ernest did his best to make himself agreeable, and a reawakened Amy was, to her mother's mind, the personification of charm and light-hearted wit. The young man, who was in no need of further information, was most careful to avoid all reference to the departed lodger, and any faint suspicions which his relatives might have possessed were soon dispelled. He told them, instead of his commercial triumphs, and hinted at a prospective order so large that he might have to leave the city for a couple of days to make sure of its prompt execution. At the conclusion of the repast he gallantly invited Amy to share with him the large easy-chair, where they sat hand in hand, to his aunt's delighted approval. Mr. Pank thrust his feet to the fire and became absorbed in the morning paper. Presently his better half glanced at the clock.

"Half-past 9" she announced. "What about it, Amy?"

Amy Sighs in Reply.

Amy rose with a sigh.

"I wish it was Saturday," she muttered. "I hate going to bed early and I hate getting up early."

"Some day perhaps," her cousin commented, as he kissed her, "you won't have to. Marry a man with money, my dear. That's all you have to do."

Amy very nearly blushed, and Mrs. Pank's expansiveness warned her nephew that he had better be careful. He looked across at his uncle.

"Do you ever turn out these nights?" he asked.

"I don't often," Mr. Pank observed thoughtfully, as though the idea were a new one to him. "There's the Blue Dragon almost opposite."

"Come on," his nephew invited. "We'll just have one. You don't mind, do you, aunt?"

Mrs. Pank was not in the humor to object to anything. Hats and coats were produced, and uncle and nephew crossed the broad street to where the bright lights of a large public house invited their visit. Mr. Pank seated himself heavily upon the divan.

"Kind of running away with us, ain't you, young man?" he remarked shrewdly, as his nephew ordered him a double whisky.

"Oh, I don't know," was the friendly reply. "We relatives don't see enough of one another."

"I'm a man of few words," Mr. Pank said, as he watched the arrival of his whisky, a small jug of hot water and a piece of lemon as per command, "a man of few words I am, but you be careful about Amy, young fellow. She's a good girl and I don't want her head turned. If you've done a bit better in the world than we have and you're thinking of amusing yourself——"

The young man patted him on the shoulder.

"Don't be silly, Uncle," he enjoined lightly. "Young people understand one another nowadays. They have a bit of fun and there you are."

Holds U. S. Quality Tests of Minor Impressiveness to Shopper.

New York, Feb. 1 (AP).—The psychology of a woman in the matter of the purchase of stockings was expounded here by Allyn B. McIntyre, president of the Association of National Advertisers, as an example to disprove the wisdom of governmental regulation, to wit: she cares little that government tests might show relative mediocre quality so long as her legs are made "more alluring to those whom she might aim to attract."

Attacking the Tugwell and Huddleston bills and other governmental measures for regulation of advertising, McIntyre contended further that encouragement of the consumer to adopt a defensive attitude would cause "tremendous setback" to their "metaphysical joy in making purchases."

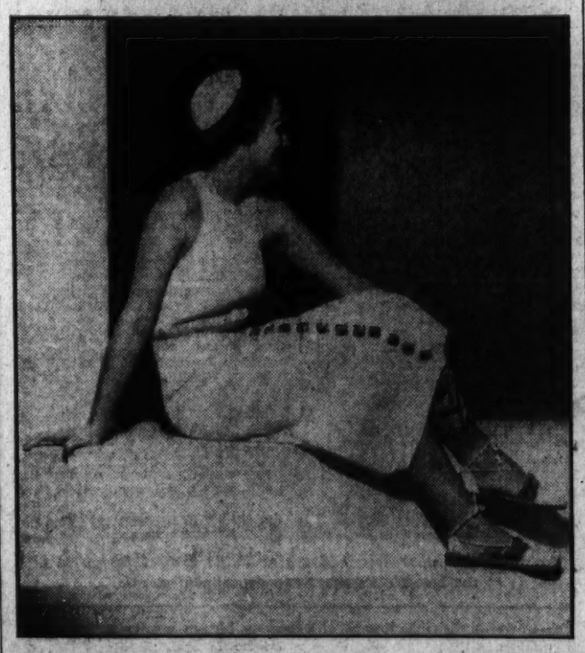
"I am getting a little tired of pedagogues, demagogues and just plain gogues taking their pens in hand and taking a crack at one of the most protective devices (advertising) the consumer has," he said.

"When a woman buys a pair of stockings," he said, "she is, of course, greatly concerned with the wear they will give. At the same time, she is also tremendously interested in how those stockings look with her suede shoes, what her husband thinks of them, and how she thinks they wash.

"She may not know what the exact laboratory report on these stockings may be, but she does have a definite personal opinion as to whether the color is right, whether they come out of the wash with the sheen or dullness she likes, and whether they have the kind of knit which appeals to her.

"Now, in spite of the stockings being of relative mediocre quality, as far as their construction would be revealed by tests which the Government might make upon them, they have, in spite of these shortcomings, given this woman exactly what she wants. We may even go so far as to say that they have done the primary thing she is interested in, by making her legs more alluring to those whom she might aim to attract."

Tricky Crocheted Dress for Sports



Here is a stunning and versatile Dunhill garment. It is fundamentally a dress, but it does all sorts of tricks. The entire dress is crocheted of a heavy cotton crochet cord which is cool and comfortable. The straight skirt is buttoned up the front with square wooden buttons and it will come undone as far as you need it for a vicious serve or a flying leap after the rope rings. It is backless to the waist and has two narrow straps which button together over the spinal column with the same brown buttons.

Thermometers and Common Sense . . . .

It's a cold morning.

How did you know?

Did you look at the thermometer or did your tingling fingers shout the news? Perhaps the thermometer verified your own opinion but you knew it was cold before you looked. Your common sense told you.

Exactly!

When you take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound or any other medicine—how do you know it helps you? Do you ask the neighbors? Do you try to figure it out on a scientific basis?

Certainly not.

You feel better and your common sense tells you what caused it.

Science may confirm your own opinion, but you knew it all the time.

By Elizabeth Perrow.

Charm is the most important thing in life.

Real charm is born of the desire to be happy and to make others happy.

Thus believes Mrs. Julia Peterkin, famous South Carolina novelist. Mrs. Peterkin, who is the author of many famous books depicting Negro life, including "Scarlet Sister Mary," Pulitzer prize winner, is at the Mayflower for a short stay.

"Tolerance, kindness, courtesy; all these qualities are a part of true charm," Mrs. Peterkin said yesterday. "And I am quite certain that there is nothing equally important. These things are essential for a person to be happy and successful."

Mrs. Peterkin, who is herself everything that a charming Southern woman should be, spoke with conviction and enthusiasm.

Happiness in Marriage.

"Personally I do not think there is any greater career for a woman than to be the wife of a successful and happy man; and to know that she has had a part in making that man what he is. For what a man is when a woman marries him is not important; it is what he is at the end of life that shows whether or not her life has been successful.

"You know," she continued, "we do not have divorces in South Carolina, and we like it. For marriage is not just a relationship between two persons. It is the basis of all our civilization, and it should be enduring. And if a person is disappointed, the only sporting thing to do is to keep it to himself and make the best of it. Tolerance and understanding make many a marriage succeed that almost failed."

No desire to reform the world, or to tackle the race problem, lie back of Mrs. Peterkins' resolve to write of Negro life. She thought it would be a good hobby.

Dixie Story Tellers.

"You know in the South we talk a great deal," she said. "We have to; there is nothing else to do. So we are all good story tellers. We have to be or else no one will listen to us. And, of course, we all tell Negro stories.

"So I knew a lot of stories and I thought I would write them down. I never have worried about the Negro problem. I am too Southern to worry about anything."

There is no reason why women should not write if they want to, Mrs. Peterkin believes. Then, she added, as an afterthought:

"Women really are people, don't you think? Of course, I don't see any reason why a woman should go into politics. I am very happy not to be in all that confusion. But still I think that the industrial revolution has created a different kind of woman and that this new woman is happy in politics and big business. Then too, every woman can't get married. There aren't enough charming men to go around.

Old Plantation Life.

"As for me, I am living the life of a hundred years ago on my plantation. We go hunting, and I plant roses, and now I am planning to make wine. I write what I want, when I want, because I like to write. I like my life.

"Do you think people have to have a great creative urge to write? Because I never have. Of course, I may write very badly. I don't know. Some persons think I write very well and some of them think I don't. As for my neighbors, I don't think they have read any of my books. I really don't see why they should. I write about Negroes; and they all know Negroes."

Mrs. Peterkin said that she often meets her friends on the hunting field, and they sometimes refer casually to her books.

Some Should Stop Writing.

"Only recently a friend of mine said to me: 'Julia, I know you have written some books, and I am going to read some of them some day. But I don't think he ever will.'"

The greatest trouble with most authors is that they write too much, said Mrs. Peterkin.

"There are many persons writing today who would have made a greater and more lasting impression if they had stopped writing earlier. They have played an important part in the development of the literature, and in forming the ideas of people in this country, but their work is done. And when I read their books I have the feeling that they are only saying over again what they have said much better in the past.

"But," Mrs. Peterkin concluded. "You can't have charm or do worthwhile work or accomplish anything if you don't have an enthusiasm for living. I love life. I wake up every morning and think how glorious it is just to be here. Bored? Oh—never."

JULIA PETERKIN.

Original of National Anthem to Be Shown

Baltimore, Feb. 1 (AP).—Mounted on a red velvet covered wall, the original manuscript of the National Anthem, "The Star-Spangled Banner," will be on display when the doors of the Walters Art Gallery are thrown open to the public tomorrow for the first time.

Francis Scott Key's masterpiece, recently purchased for $24,000 following an auction in New York, will be flanked by an American flag and the Maryland flag. Near-by will be a picture of Key by a contemporary artist and a printed copy of the anthem.

On another wall of the room will hang a portrait of Roger B. Taney, brother-in-law of Key and a Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court. On the third will be Gilbert C. Stuart's portrait of George Washington.

What Today Means

"Aquarius."

If February 2 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7:30 to 8:30 a. m., from 1:20 to 2:20 p. m. and from 4:30 to 5:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 9 to 10 a. m., from 3 to 4 p. m. and from 10 to 11 p. m.

If you were born on February 2, there is a streak of recklessness in your nature. This will often lead you into strange, and at times ludicrous adventures, to say nothing of getting you into hot water when you yield to some impetuous impulse. You would do well to constantly remember to "look before you leap." Be careful on this date not to become involved in a quarrel, by getting in an argument or making some drastic statement.

The child born on February 2, as soon as it is old enough to display it, may dismay you by its pugnacious disposition. This need cause you no alarm, for it will soon learn that such tendencies are best kept under control. This child will have a very impulsive, but marvelously affectionate disposition, and as it grows older shall exercise very good judgment in everything it does. It will all through its life have high ideals.

The young woman born on February 2 is inclined to express her opinion on weighty matters without careful consideration, or realization that it might have considerable influence on those requesting it. For this reason be very cautious how you answer questions, or discuss important affairs. Your actions are frequently prompted by "snap" judgment and unless you are careful to curb this tendency, embarrassing situations may result. You are fortunate in being the type that not only commands love, but respect as well.

The man born on February 2 can, if roused, attain great heights in emotional expression, especially in either the religious or political fields. He possesses a clarity of thought, and an eloquence of speech that will gain him recognition as an orator.

I Am Contrary.

By Katherine Smith.

Dance lightly, Laughter, and be nonchalant,
I write no songs of mirth when I am glad;
Return, Despair, to your too dismal haunt,
I write no lines of pain when I am sad;
And give me, Life, the many things I want,
I'll write of all the things I wish I had.

Expert Shoots Holes in Health Guarding Ideas

Questions Value of Many Long-Accepted Rules for Keeping Well.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 1 (AP).—Dr. Warren E. Forsythe, director of the University of Michigan health service, looks with some skepticism upon a number of old-fashioned ideas concerning health and hygiene as taught in the home and some school rooms.

Some of these ideas, Dr. Forsythe says, are outdated; others are unimportant and some actually harmful. He mentions, as a few of the theories that have been brought down in the home from the unenlightened past, the warning against eating between meals; the belief that green apples cause stomach ache; that sour foods and milk don't readily mix and the urge to "stand up straight" in the interest of good health. Oh, yes, and there are the "deep breathing exercises," and the recommendation that the drinking of large amounts of water is "good for the system."

Health Bathing Overrated.

Bathing for health also is much overrated in Dr. Forsythe's opinion. He agrees that it is important for "esthetic and social reasons," but so far as its health virtues are concerned, that, says the doctor, is difficult to prove.

Of "eating between meals," Dr. Forsythe says: "Social custom alone has set the time for eating. Piecing between meals need not be harmful if the total quantity and quality of food is sufficient."

Enforced deep breathing exercises, he holds, may cause dizziness or actual fainting; excessive "washing out" of the carbon dioxide in the blood is useless if not harmful. Breathing should be only in response to body activity.

Water Drinking Gauge.

Human beings, he adds, if normal, will drink what water they really need.

Of the recommendation to "stand up straight," Dr. Forsythe says that it is likely good posture depends on good health and not vice versa, and adds that personal appearance and self-respect should dictate a good posture.

And of the frequently heard advice "take some medicine," he recommends: "Don't, unless the doctor gives it, and do not force him to do so if he apparently does not think it necessary."

SENORA DE ARCAYA,

wife of the Minister of Venezuela, is shown here with Pedro Manuel, jr., aged 4, who is the youngest of her seven children. Like the majority of her countrywomen, Senora De Arcaya devotes herself almost exclusively to the interests of her home and family. She has carried over from her youth, however, an interest in the silversmith's craft, and with her own hands makes many beautiful things in repousse.

Senora de Arcaya Produces Beautiful Pieces of Repousse

Helpmeet of Latin American Diplomat Finds Time for Arts in Addition to Duties as Official Hostess and Supervising Education of Three Sons and Four Daughters.

Women of far-off lands are very like the women of our own country. Love of home and family, interest in the betterment of society, loyalty to the best in the traditions of the past and intelligent receptivity toward new ideas are characteristics of womankind all over the world.

These facts are revealed in the series of interviews with women of the Diplomatic Corps in Washington, of which the following is the eleventh.

By Elizabeth Young.

For real comfort, Washington is one of the most delightful places in the world in which to live, in the opinion of Senora de Arcaya, wife of the Minister of Venezuela.

"Everything one needs for living comfortably is right at hand. Here, one finds the many inventions of this and other lands for expediting the machinery of existence, in greater degree than is afforded by any other country," she told a Woman's Page representative.

Mother of seven children—three sons and four daughters—Senora de Arcaya spends a great deal of time in her home. And in this she is not different from others of her fellow countrywomen, she says.

"They are brought up with the idea of making a home and rearing families, and they do it very well," she said of Venezuelan women.

"For the most part they are educated in convents and private schools, although we have the coeducational system in the universities and colleges where women may go for higher learning if they wish. Academic requirements are the same in all the secondary schools and students must pass their final examinations before an official federal board.

"There seems to be increasing need for professional education among women, however, and we have a few women doctors and teachers."

Senora de Arcaya's daughters, Isabel, 14; Ana, 11; Maria Theresa, 8; and Ignacia, 6; all of whom are in school in Washington, speak Spanish, English and French, and while they are being trained in the Venezuelan tradition, they will be free to elect a specialized education for work outside the home if they should so desire.

"Most of us have our youthful plans before we marry; but afterward we find ourselves as a rule well content to devote ourselves exclusively to home and family," Senora de Arcaya remarked.

She painted a picture of home life in her own country. There, the mother leaves the home only occasionally, perhaps once a week, to attend a concert, the theater, or some social function. She finds her days pleasantly full with the task of ordering a large household with many servants and several children.

Senor de Arcaya's Books.

The De Arcaya's own home at Caracas, high in the mountains of Venezuela, is a quiet retreat set back in a 35-acre park. During their absence, it has been leased as a home for Italy's Minister to Venezuela.

There Senor de Arcaya, who has twice been Minister of the Interior, a high cabinet post in his country, has a magnificent library of 60,000 books. An additional wing was built to house the collection.

There, also, Senora de Arcaya found time to make many beautiful things in repousse silver. This art, which today is among the rarest surviving metal crafts, produces an ornamental effect formed in bas relief, often chased and set with precious stones. One of her principal achievements was the decoration of the furnishings of her great dining room at Caracas with such ornamentation. She had pieces taken out of chairs and tables, and in their place inserted burnished plaques of repousse work fashioned by her own hand. Last summer in Washington she made a number of small boxes in repousse.

Second Residence Here.

In her girlhood, Senora de Arcaya did a great deal of painting, another art in which she became intensely interested during her school days.

Although the climate of Washington is very different from the high, dry, invigorating atmosphere of her mountain homeland, it is not disagreeable to Senaroa de Arcaya. In fact, she prefers it to the climate of many countries she has visited.

This is her second period of residence in Washington. Her first stay, for 18 months, was in 1922, '23 and '24. She has been here four years now, coming from France, where her husband had been stationed for a year. Their youngest child, Pedro Manuel, jr., who is 4, speaks English with greater fluency than Spanish. He seems to prefer the English tongue, and lapses into Spanish only when speaking with his mother.

As a matter of principle, Senora de Arcaya accepts very seriously the responsibility of knowing the point of view and problems of her children from earliest childhood. She thinks the mother must be the balance wheel in the life of the home, stimulating and coordinating the interests of each into a progressive, harmonious integrity.

Read in tomorrow's Post what the gifted Mme. Veverka, wife of the Minister of Czechoslovakia, thinks of the role which art plays in the lives of individuals and nations.

Linen and Satin Are Combined In New Modes

Linen is finding itself among unfamiliar fabrics this spring. Sometimes it is combined with satin. Sometimes it is used with wool crepe. A black dress of satin and linen was shown at a recent Paris opening. The same house introduced a dark wool crepe frock with natural colored linen jacket. The jacket was sprinkled with coin dots the color of the frock.

Fine linen and sturdy lace have been united in an informal afternoon dress by another designer. The linen is in a sweet, cloudy pink. The lace is in deep cream and has been used for short-sleeved yoke and for diamond-shaped insets in the slim, straight skirt.

Lace, in more delicate versions, is one of the most important materials for afternoon and evening costumes. Some of the most striking evening gowns are skin-tight affairs that billow below the knees with fluffy tulle flounces. The glued-to-the-figure effect is achieved with two-way-stretch lace that expands enough for the wearer to get into her gown without much difficulty but draws tight about the body when the gown has been donned.

The Russian couturiere who made these sculptured lace models has even used lace for beach attire. At her opening she introduced a lace beach frock in several shades of blue. The lines, including an ordinary sailor collar, were extremely simple.

In addition to linen, in a variety of combinations, and lace, the outstanding fabric favorite for spring is matelasse organdy. Dark colored blocks on white are striking, as well as a number of tailored patterns on dark grounds.

Girl Scout Training Council to Be Held

National Adviser to Confer With Officials Monday.

Miss Edith Conant, national training adviser of the Girl Scouts, will be in Washington Monday to meet with the members of the training and personnel committee and the staff of both Baltimore and Washington Girl Scout Councils. Miss Mary Parlett, commissioner in Baltimore, and Mrs. Horace Westcott, commissioner in Washington, will also attend the meetings.

Miss Conant became associated with the National Girl Scout organization in September, 1924. Previously she was a volunteer captain in Boston and director of field work for the Manhattan Council, New York City. The summer of 1932 she was director of training of Camp Edith Macy, the National Girl Scout leaders' training school in the woods at Briarcliff Manor, N. Y.

The Washington training and personnel committee includes Mrs. C. E. Waters, chairman; Mrs. Trueman Abbey, Mrs. J. P. Leake, Mrs. L. D. O'Flarety, Mrs. M. B. McMain, Mrs. Tyler Dennett, Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, Mrs. H. C. Kramer, Mrs. Arthur Orr and Mrs. W. F. Mulligan.

Culbertson on Bridge

By Ely Culbertson.

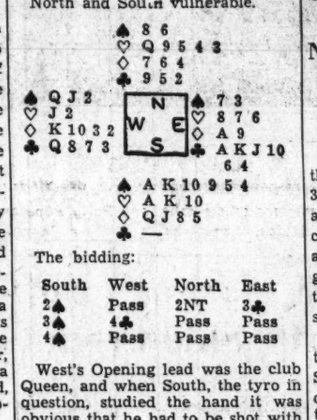
A Delirious Thrill.

Mr. James T. Hunter of North Adams, Mass., seems to be able to find a very considerable number of interesting hands in his Bridge playing coterie. In submitting the hand which is discussed below he remarks that all have heard of the beautiful but dumb, the innocent uninitiated, the casualness of ignorance, and asserts that all apply to the play of the hand below. He might have added that also the old adage. "Nothing succeeds like success," has an equal application. The fact that the play was made by a tyro, without any appreciation of its purpose, of course, in some degree detracts from its value. However, in the play as made, there is a lesson which good players and bad, experts, average and dubs, may apply to their own advantage.

South, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2♠	Pass	2NT	3♣
3♠	4♣	Pass	Pass
4♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

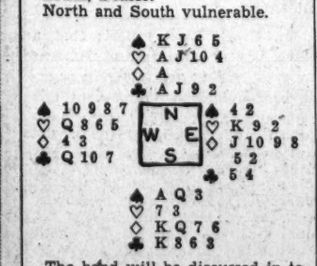
West's Opening lead was the club Queen, and when South, the tyro in question, studied the hand it was obvious that he had to be shot with luck to fulfill the contract. Certainly if either opponent had four spades to the Queen-Knave, the contract was not makable. The heart split of 4-1 might also defeat it. But if the spades were 3-2 and the hearts 3-2, and the Ace and King of diamonds in the same hand, all might be well. This, of course, is a most optimistic expectancy.

All this went hurriedly through the mind of South—perhaps not clearly but anyhow with the rightness instinctive to many beginners, and, basing his play upon the experience of many expert players who, when in a tight place, give their opponents an opportunity to err, South led the spade 4. West was amazed, but, reviewing in his own mind the bidding and recalling that East had overcalled the Opening Forcing bid and its response with a bid of three clubs, he ducked, thinking that East held either the Ace or King of spades and that if he were to play a high one East's honor might fall with it. Alas for West's correct reasoning! The eight of spades in Dummy won. Then South followed with another spade and the play of the Ace-King. When the hearts broke 3-2 South had no occasion to worry about the location of the diamond honors.

Tomorrow's Hand.

If South reaches a contract of six notrump and the heart five is opened by West, how should the hand be developed to fulfill the contract?

South, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.



The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Woman Wins Prize For Forestry Photo

Mrs. Bayard Wootten, gifted artist of Chapel Hill, N. C., has won the North Carolina State award offered by the American Forestry Association in its contest for pictures of the most beautiful trees in America. Mrs. Wootten achieved this distinction with the picture Live Oaks, taken in the famous Middleston place gardens of Charleston, S. C., the oldest landscaped gardens in America.

It is said that it took 100 slaves ten years to complete the gardens.

Smith Alumnae College Magnet To Many Here

Novel Activity That Started Last Year Has Study As Serious Object.

In pursuance of the philosophy that schooling may be resumed at 30, 40, or even 80, Washington alumnae of Smith College are discussing plans for returning to their alma mater in June. These former graduates will go back—not to attend banquets and make sentimental speeches—but to study.

Courses have been announced for the annual Alumnae College that Smith instituted last June. At this one-week event, which may be attended by both the alumnae and their husbands, Germany will be the theme of study. The period covered will be from 1870 to the present.

Mrs. Coolidge Student.

Topics will include the land and the people, the constitutions under Bismarck and Hitler, also the Weimar constitution, Germany's foreign policy since 1918 and recent developments in psychology, science, art, architecture and music. To vary the routine of lecture and classroom, the alumnae will do Bavarian dances on the green.

Many Smith College alumnae who return for the commencement and the annual reunion of classes will remain for the Alumnae College. Among those who attended the college last June was Mrs. Calvin Coolidge. Mrs. William Chapin Huntington, of Washington, president of the National Smith College Alumnae Association, also attended.

Smith Pioneer in Field.

Smith College was the first woman's college to establish an Alumnae College. Instruction is by the lecture method and general discussion. The enrollment last June was 210, including five husbands, three mothers and seven friends of alumnae.

The Smith College Club of Washington is concentrating its activities now on the benefit performance of "Double Door" Monday night at the National Theater. The proceeds will go to the club's scholarship fund. The play was written by Miss Elizabeth MacFadden, a Smith College graduate.

Through the activities of Smith College alumnae clubs, sufficient scholarship funds have been raised, so that no girl attending Smith has been forced to leave college because of lack of finances.

Men's Spring Clothes to Be Decidedly Gayer But Epidemic of Dizzy Dressers Not Expected

By Amos Parrish

New York, Feb. 1.—It may be a general feeling of better times. And it may be a long-suppressed desire for more life and liberty in their clothes. Whatever you want to blame for it, men's spring clothes are going gayer.

But don't look for an epidemic of dizzy dressers. Or a revival of the Classy-Cut Age. Because the only kind of gayness American men will accept is a neat, thoroughly wearable gayness. A brighter but not a wild-looking kind of clothes. Gayer colors . . . but not scream-at-you colors. More interesting patterns—but always wearable patterns.

The fellow in the sketch, for example, is obviously more gayly dressed than the typically better-dressed man of other years. But it's the kind of brightness and color and pattern that looks easy to wear . . . and is.

As you can see, it's set off by a plain white shirt, a plain white pocket handkerchief, a plain polo coat, and a plain but richer-shaded snap brim hat. It's the spring 1934 man, feeling better about things. And looking it.

Season of More Color.

The simple facts are that the drabness and colorlessness of men's clothes is going out. Has been for some time now. And you'll feel it more than ever this coming season which is going to be a season of colorful grays and blue-grays and tans. In fact, the newer, richer blue-grays will be one of the new things you'll notice most in spring suits.

It's also going to be a stripe-and-check suit season . . . in lighter and brighter tones. But the kind of stripes and the kind of checks that won't frighten you. The first thing you'll notice about them is their easy-on-the-eye quality. The second thing—after you put one on—is the feeling that they give you of being more individually and more portily dressed. Another thing about these checks is that your build doesn't affect the case. You can wear them, regardless.

More Snap in Hats.

This gayness-feeling will break out in hats, too. A little-lighter grays and tans. A bit more gayly-snapped brims . . . neither wide nor narrow . . . with a brisk curl an da clean-cut snap.

And it goes for shirts, too. More of them striped. More will be checked (some of them with the much-worn English shadow-check). And all of them gayer-colored either deeper-toned or multi-colored.

You'll see and wear the same gayness in socks . . . their colors lighter and brighter, more of them checked and striped . . . to go with gayer ties which are checked and striped.

Finally, gayness goes with shoes, too—a bigger proportion of which will be browns and tans. And if you've questioned wing tips and perforated tips for yourself, you'll be a gayer-dresed man this spring when you get over your doubts and into those shoes.

Skirts Reaching for Ground In New Fashions of Paris

Paris, Feb. 1 (AP).—Longer skirts were the rule in today's fashion shows, which are beginning to indicate what's what in the spring mode.

"No more striding about in short skirts," is the present decree for all hours of the day, following upon a general trend toward greater femininity.

Although the length is far from extreme, there is a tendency to lengthen sports and street outfits to 9 to 11 inches from the ground and to make informal afternoon clothes slightly longer.

Spring coats, a big item in feminine wardrobes, appeared in sober tones of black, brown and navy in beige and wools, often brightened by scarfs of gay-colored suede silk. Street models, designed for slightly fitted waistlines, had smooth plain shoulders, the sleeves sometimes widening slightly just below the shoulders into a fullness, brushed backward.

There were scores of three-quarter-length tweed, wool and linen models, sometimes hanging loose, sometimes belted, often contrasting with the color of the dress, as a knee-length beige linen coat embroidered in black dots with a black crepe frock.

Several models had broad collars of banded suede instead of fur, which has been rarely used as yet. There were many brown, navy, taffeta, black and satin afternoon coats.

School Term Enrollment Cut by Snow

82,377 Register, Drop of 6,000 From Total Due to Start.

Approximately 6,000 children failed to attend the midyear opening of schools yesterday, due largely to the heavy snow. The total enrollment was 82,377, a decrease of 55 from the opening day of the second semester last year.

The maximum enrollment this year has been 87,109. Of these pupils, 644 were graduated from senior high schools, but at least 2,000 newcomers are expected in the school system. These are children entering the first grade.

Enrollment in the white senior high schools yesterday was 11,040, a decrease of 431 from midyear last year. The colored senior high enrollment was 3,462, in comparison to 3,553. White junior high enrollment was 11,194, in comparison to 10,262, and colored junior high, 5,357 in comparison to 4,985.

White elementary schools reported an enrollment of 30,914, while on the same day last year it was 31,735. The colored elementary enrollment was 18,314 in comparison to 18,413.

A staggered hour system was inaugurated at Western High School, two schedules being included, one from 9 a. m. to 3 p. m., and the other from 11:30 a. m. to 4:45 p. m. Applications for enrollment at Western from nonresident pupils and former Western pupils who desire to be transferred back from other schools are being received by school authorities. The applications will be ruled on Monday.

Only pupils in the first four semesters will be admitted. Dr. Stephen E. Kramer, first assistant superintendent of schools, said all those within these semesters probably will be accommodated, due to the staggered system.

Eastern and Western are the only two schools on a staggered system.

Getting What You Want

Who has barber fixtures for sale? That's what M. P. Pelc, 2112 Pennsylvania avenue N.W., wanted to know. He chose the quick way and inserted a small Classified Ad in The Post.

The "wanted" Ad found seven persons for Mr. Pelc—seven who had for sale the goods he needed. And again The Post proves itself the shortest route between seller and buyer.

All tickets for the dinner have been sold, according to Robert J. Cottrell, executive secretary of the Trade Board.

Ickes Stresses Building Need

Several New Department Structures Stated Necessary.

Need for several new permanent departmental buildings in Washington was emphasized yesterday by Secretary Ickes.

"We ought to put up several buildings," he declared in discussing the building situation. "We ought to get rid of these temporary buildings which are cluttering up space.

"As a matter of fact, they should have been gotten rid of a long time ago."

Ickes this week revealed he is planning a new building for the Interior Department, to house the whole department and whatever recovery agencies under that department that become permanent.

He stated he had no definite plans for a number of new buildings, but that he is giving the matter considerable thought.

Starlings, Buffeted by Storm, Skid From Capitol Into Trees

Snow-Laden Pests Find Going Hard, but They Can Take It!

If starlings were less resourceful creatures, if they didn't have such rugged constitutions, and if it snowed every day when they came home to roost—if these three ifs could be realized, the starling problem would cease to exist without resort to hydrocyanic gas.

This conclusion was reached during a tour of inspection at dusk yesterday as the birds returned to their rosts after spending the day feeding. Bucking the snow flurries was as tough for them as it was for pedestrians below, and landings were even more precarious.

One starling after another alighted on some high ledge, only to skid off. It was comical to the onlooker, but decidedly embarrassing to the bird.

Some of them just failed to make it from their feeding grounds along the Potomac to the Capitol dome, Franklin Bank, the old Garfinkel Building, and other nocturnal haunts, and fluttered to the ground, their wings coated with ice and snow. Several were picked up in Farragut Square.

"But the startling starlings can take it; make no mistake about that! Those that skidded off the ledges promptly made for the nearest tree and formed temporary colonies on the highest branches. Twigs and limbs are easier to cling to than slippery stone, don't you know.

Snuggled close for warmth in their emergency tree roosts, the birds seemed to mind the snow not a bit. Wings were put out of commission by the added weight, but tomorrow's a thaw and a new day.

Space was at a premium on the cornice of the new Department of Justice Building at Tenth street and Pennsylvania avenue, best protected of all the rosts. The Capitol was a screeching bedlam as thousands of late comers vainly maneuvered for positions in the crowded porticos and dome.

On the whole, Washington's starling armies carried themselves nobly in the battle against nature. But they will have to draw on all their fortitude when David Lynn, architect of the Capitol, goes after them with gas, as he threatens to do.

D. C. Gets It

No Heirs, Kin to Claim Vendor's Estate.

Because he died without leaving any heirs at law or next of kin, the District of Columbia will benefit to the extent of $665 from the estate of Henry Myer, 95-year-old match box vendor of Seventh and F streets northwest, who died January 18.

Myer left that amount of money in the Lincoln National Bank. The undertaking firm of James T. Ryan, Inc., 317 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, filed a petition, setting forth that it was the largest creditor, and that as such it was entitled to administer the estate.

The funeral bill was $299. When that and other small items are paid the District Government will be given the remainder.

Rush-Hour Ban On Parking Set

Order Effective Monday on 16th Street South of Scott Circle.

Parking during rush hours on Sixteenth street, south of Scott Circle, will be restricted under a regulation which will be issued by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, effective Monday.

Parking on the west side of the street will be forbidden between the hours of 8 and 9:30 a. m., and no parking will be allowed on the east side from 4:30 to 6 p. m.

Similar restrictions on parking north of Scott Circle has cut eight minutes from the riding time from Spring road to the downtown section. Since the one-way traffic rule has been in effect during rush hours on Thirteenth street, Van Duzer said, the thoroughfare has been carrying more traffic than it did when two-way traffic was permitted.

2 Held for Grand Jury On Stolen Car Charge

A $7,000 bond was set for two defendants in Police Court yesterday, after they were ordered held for grand jury action under charges of using a stolen car and operating a smoke screen.

Willie Williams and James King, colored, were arrested by Traffic Bureau police following a lengthy chase early Sunday. The pursuit started when Policeman George W. Cook and E. C. Darby recognized license plates on their machine as listed to a stolen car, they said. A smoke screen was loosed, the policemen testified, and the machine overtaken only after it crashed into a garage.

Medals Cast To Help Law Enforcement

Flag Group to Decorate Those Who Promoted Obedience.

Outstanding service in the advancement and promotion of law enforcement will be given public recognition by the United States Flag Association under a plan announced yesterday by Senator Robert R. Reynolds, of North Carolina. Senator Reynolds is chairman of the board of the organization.

A new decoration, the "Law Enforcement Medal," has been created by the Association which, in the past, has awarded its Cross of Honor for distinguished service to the flag to Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, the late President Coolidge, former President Hoover, Mrs. Edward F. Hutton and Amelia Earhart. The new award will be given in connection with the present Nation-wide war on crime.

"The purpose of awarding the Law Enforcement Medal is to stress the importance of strict enforcement of the law and to commend publicly law-abiding citizens in their efforts to stamp out crime," asserted Senator Reynolds yesterday.

"We must quit heroizing gangsters and racketeers and dramatizing crime in the country."

In each State and in the District juries of award are being formed. The citizen of each State who, during the last year, did most to advance or encourage law enforcement will be nominated to receive the medal.

Reorganization Of Mayflower HotelLaunched

$500 Bond and Stock Offered Holders of $1,000 Mortgages.

Reorganization of the Mayflower Hotel Co. began yesterday with the filing for registration with the Federal Trade Commission under the securities act of a new issue of sinking fund gold bonds.

According to the commission's registration announcement, the plans call for formation of a new company to acquire and operate physical properties of the Mayflower Hotel Co. covered by its first mortgage. Deposit is proposed for $1,910,000 principal amount of bonds, the amount not on deposit with three first mortgage bondholders' committees as of December 28.

On consummation of the plan, depositing bondholders would receive for each $1,000 in principal of first mortgage bonds $500 in new 15-year, 4½ per cent general mortgage sinking fund bonds, together with 10 shares of capital stock. Proportionately smaller amounts will be authorized for holders of less than $1,000 bonds.

The new bonds will have a maximum total of $3,721,500 and the entire outstanding capital stock of the proposed new company would amount to 74,430 shares. All capital stock, the announcement said, issued in exchange for first mortgage bonds may be issued to Stanton Peelle, William L. Beale and Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, voting trustees.

The proposed issue will be taken under consideration by the Federal Trade Commission. If no objections are uncovered in 20 days, the issue may be authorized.

New Films Reviewed at Metropolitan and Keith's—Others That Open Tomorrow

Quackery Made Basis of Play On Met Screen

Warren William Starred; Wheeler and Woolsey Nutty, as Usual.

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

When the simple title of "Bedside" was changed to "Secrets of a Bedside Physican," one began to suspect that the producers sensed a drastic need on the part of this screen fable of a little helpful bolstering on the side of mild sensationalism. They were eminently correct in their surmise. It needs even more than that!

It is difficult to detect any justification for ever having made "Secrets of a Bedside Physician." From the viewpoint of the medical fraternity, it must be indefensible; its romance scarcely compensates for the unpleasant things the more sinister aspects of its development suggest, and such acting skill as it employs might better have been devoted to more authentic and substantial subject matter.

The "bedside physician" in this instance had only one secret, shared at first by only two other people, but later known by many. That was, that he was not a physician at all, but merely a medical student who forged a diploma, filched from a dope addict, fascinated feminine hypochondriacs with a mesmeric bedside manner and left everything else to a competent practitioner, hired at small cost.

Falls in Crisis.

When finally confronted with the crisis of an emergency operation upon the girl he loved, whose skull was fractured in a street accident caused by her anxiety to shield him from exposure, the whole sorry business comes out and the masquerading tyro escapes prison only through the hospital authorities' unwillingness to bring unpleasant notoriety to their institution by prosecution.

Completely antiethical to the honest depiction of a life of sacrificial service set forth some seasons ago in "The Country Doctor," in which the late Joseph Schildkraut played the title role, "Secrets of a Bedside Physician" seeks to fulfill no worthy purpose beyond exposing the manner in which the practice of medicine and surgery may be made a handsomely camouflaged and highly profitable racket, operated in direct violation of the law.

Warren William plays earnestly in the role of the young impostor and manages to create a quality of some conviction in scenes and situations that more often than not place a severe strain upon the credulity. His portrayal is entitled to a word of commendation, if for no other reason, because he makes no attempt to soften or palliate the offensive attributes with which the bogus Dr. Martel is so richly endowed. Opposite him, Jean Muir, an icy and unbending blonde, plays with chill austerity the role of the office nurse who is at once the young doctor's downfall and his redemption. Miss Muir is beautiful, even if not electric.

Support and Supplementaries.

Leading the support are David Landau, in a disturbingly honest revelation of the evil consequences of drug addiction; Allen Jenkins, the Broadway press agent who puts the medical racketeer over in a big way, and Kathryn Sergava, the former Russian dancer, who appears as an opera star who all but meets death at the bungling hands of the fraudulent surgeon, whose reputation once more is saved by the miraculous proficiency of his hired assistant, quietly and effectively impersonated by Donald Meek.

Supplementing the feature are a new issue of the Paramount Sound News and a Vitaphone musical subject, "A Little Girl with Big Ideas," starring Molly Picon, the diminutive actress who graduated from New York's Ghetto to the bright lights of Times Square. Miss Picon's work, like her vehicle, is decidedly spotty, with the balance slightly on the side of tunefulness and humor, thanks to the excellence of "The Old Lady," "Rollin' i the Dough" and "Bring Back the Bicycle Days," three songs better than the usual run of short-subjects "production numbers."

RKO-Keith's

"HIPS, HIPS, HOORAY." RKO-Radio picturization of a screen story by Bert Kalmar, Harry Ruby and Edward Kaufman, starring Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey, with Dorothy Lee, Ruth Etting, Thelma Todd and George Meeker. Directed by Mark Sandrich. Reviewed Wednesday night by W. A. Whitney.

Going literally from the sublime to the ridiculous, RKO-Keith's takes off "The Man of Two Worlds" and presents Wheeler and Woolsey in their funniest, fastest and cleanest picture—"Hips, Hips, Hooray."

Inasmuch as the story must be laid somewhere, the salon of the Maiden American Beauty Preparations, Inc., is selected—and what Bert and Bob can not find to do in such an establishment is not worth mentioning. Besides what you expect, the star team manages to win a transcontinental automobile race and to save the institution—and themselves—from an ignominious end.

A typical Wheeler-Woolsey vehicle, with the added quality of being continually and genuinely hilarious, "Hips, Hips, Hooray" rushes along from gag to gag, from comedy situation to comedy situation, with increasing effectiveness and speed, climaxing the mad display with a wild race whose only equal in current cinema is Eddie Cantor's chariot run in "Roman Scandals."

Dorothy Bert's Foil.

Dorothy Lee is, of course, Mr. Wheeler's charming and vivacious foil, with Thelma Todd playing the part of a cosmetic shop proprietress and teaming up with Mr. Woolsey. Ruth Etting is a further embellishment, playing under her own name as a radio singer. The villainy (?) of the piece is carried by George Meeker, with James Burtis and Mat Briggs doing the omnipresent detectives.

Especially worthy of comment is Mr. Woolsey's advent into the motion picture as a comedy singer. "Keep on Doin' What You're Doin'" is a grand tune for the Wheeler-Lee and Woolsey-Todd combines. It would seem that RKO-Radio has here stumbled into a combination what is a combination! Thelma always did have what it takes!

Chief among the subsidiary attractions is the first of the cinematized "Minute Mysteries," the newspaper feature by H. A. Ripley. "The Clown Dies" is the selection, with the audience being given 10 seconds to think out the climactic clue. Other short subjects include another of the Myer Davis musical shorts, "The Strange Case of Hennessy," with Cliff Edwards playing the central role; the Cubby Bear Cartoon, "The Gay Gaucho," and a release of Pathe News.

Meyer Davis Is Stage Star at Fox Next Week

Washington's own Meyer Davis brings his now celebrated society orchestra to the stage of Loew's Fox Theater tomorrow to headline a vaudeville program of merit, while on the screen will be seen that gifted German star, Dorothea Wieck, and Alice Brady in a thrill-packed, pulsating drama, "Miss Fane's Baby Is Stolen."

Baby Le Roy, Jack La Rue, George Berbier, Dorothy Burgess, William Frawley and Little "Spanky" McFarland are included in a cast of 30 players. Rupert Hughes authored this dramatic story.

"Miss Fane's Baby Is Stolen" brings to the screen for the first time the dread terror that has swept the Nation with the kidnaping of babies. It tells the story of Baby Le Roy, son of Miss Wieck, who plays the part of a glamorous picture star, who is "snatched" from his crib and is held for ransom by a trio of ruthless desperadoes over whom the sinister Jack La Rue reigns.

In addition to Meyer Davis and his musical unit that specializes in mellowed melody and features specialty numbers by Alice White and Harry, the stage program includes the comedy of Buster West and his aids, Carter De Haven, jr., and Muriel Gardner, Commedienne Mary Haynes and the Lynton and Jans Revue with Frank Little, Joe Zeppa, and Jimmie Smith.

An overture and news events are added.

Palace Stages Midnight Show With 30 Stars

Constance Bennett enacts a dual role and sings several catchy numbers in the musical romance, "Moulin Rouge," which Loew's Palace Theater will introduce with a special midnight showing tonight. Tickets for this event may now be purchased at all Loew theaters, as well as many of the leading hotels and drug stores.

An added attraction for this midnight preview will be the appearance of some 30 Hollywood personalities on the Palace stage, including Jack Mulhall, Antonio Moreno, Mary Carlisle, Roscoe Ates, Dorothy Dunbar (Mrs. Max Baer), Creighton Hale, Eddie Quillan, Ben Turpin, Anna Q. Nilsson, 12 of Hollywood's prettiest girls who appear in the film, "Moulin Rouge," and other screen notables.

The picture "Moulin Rouge" is based on a French stage success by the same name. Franchot Tone, Tullio Carminati, star of the stage hit, "Strictly Dishonorable"; Helen Weslet, another stage notable; Andrew Tombes and Russ Brown, Broadway comics of note; Hobart Cavanagh, Ivan Lebedeff, Russ Columbo and the Boswell Sisters are cast in support of the glamorous Bennett.

The plot has to do with the efforts of a stage-struck wife to convince her stubborn playwright husband that she should follow a stage career.

George Sullivan to Speak.

"The Unheeded Warning of George Washington" will be the subject of an address by George E. Sullivan at a meeting of the Takoma Park Citizens' Association at 8 p. m. Monday in the Takoma Park branch library.

A Spectacular Film With Ace Acts at Earle

A pre-release showing of Warner Bros.' 1924 laugh extravaganza, "Fashions of 1934," will occupy the Earle screen for the week starting tomorrow. Jack Whiting, musical comedy and radio favorite, and Donald Novis, California's golden-voiced tenor, will share honors on the stage.

Fan dancers, stars and gorgeous gowns are the attraction in "Fashions of 1934," a First National picture. It revolves about a high-pressure promoter who corners the New York and Paris fashion marts. William Powell plays the role of the personable promoter, whose ambitious, although unscrupulous schemes keep him one step ahead of the law.

Busby Berkeley has directed the spectacle numbers of "Fashions of 1934," in which fan dancers provide the color and beauty. A mammoth fashion show is also featured, with a score of beautiful mannequins displaying the latest in women's creations.

Bette Davis has the leading feminine role opposite Powell, while Verree Teasdale is her rival in love. Others in the cast are Frank McHugh, Reginald Owen, Henry O'Neill, Hugh Herbert, Philip Reed, Gordon Westcott, Dorothy Burgess and many others.

Other stage acts are Bill Talent and Flo Merit, in "The Weigh of a Girl," and "Ray and Sunshine," sensational juvenile acrobatic dancers.

Short-reel subjects, the McNamee newsreel and the Earle Orchestra will complete the program.

Columbia Will Present Drama On Fast Train

"Orient Express," the dramatic picture that tells the story of seven lives that are completely changed as this crack train speeds across the continent, is the attraction that Loew's Columbia Theater will present starting tomorrow.

Heather Angel, the attractive young player last seen in "Berkeley Square," and Norman Foster play the romantic leads. Ralph Morgan and Herbert Mundin head the supporting cast that includes Una O'Conner, Irene Ware, Dorothy Burgess, Lisa Gora, William Irving, Roy D'Arcy, Marc Lobell and others.

Replete with thrills, ever-mounting suspense and a generous share of romance and comedy the story tells of seven strangers, who meet aboard this train, and after the journey is ended, find that their lives have been completely changed.

Paramount News, a comedy and selected short subjects are major auxiliary features of the new Columbia bill.

Secret Agents Major Figures In War Drama

Intrigue, the machinations of secret agents behind the lines of actual combat, the ruthlessness to which men and women will go when battling for power—these are the causes of motivation in Universal Pictures' newest production, "Madame Spy," which comes to the Rialto today, with Fay Wray and Nils Asther essaying the roles of chief importance.

William Hurlbut wrote the screen version of "Madame Spy," which has been superbly directed by Karl Freund, with a supporting cast that includes Edward Arnold, John Miljan, Rolly Lloyd, Noah Beery, Vince Barnett and Oscar Apfel.

The backgrounds of the picture are the capitals of Europe during the World War and the scenes shift from the gay streets of Vienna to the Russian Imperial Court, with its grandeur and its wasteful lavishness.

In completing this program, the Rialto includes a short comedy, carefully selected screen novelties and Graham McNamee in his favorite role of Talking Reporter with the latest Universal News.

Dr. Simon Speaks Tonight.

Dr. Abram Simon will address the Washington Hebrew Congregation on "Arbor Day in Palestine" this evening at 8 o'clock. Dr. Simon will discuss "A Friend in General" at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow.

The Federal Diary

BAKER.

"IT seems to be a favorite amusement among people of a certain type of mind to throw mud at Government employes." We quote part of a letter from "M. H.," at Treasury, who indignantly replies to the "Let-them-walk" statement of Senator Kean, of New Jersey.

"Even if Government workers could all be huddled within the limits of walking distance, there would be thousands unfit for duty if compelled to exhaust themselves with a walk of several miles before entering upon such duty. Thousands necessarily live miles from the offices in which they are employed. Often their homes are not convenient to street cars, which are crowded to suffocation, as it is, in the morning and evening hours.

". . . and the foregoing was not written in Government hours. I never have time for personal letters; but, having a little car, I come down early enough to get a parking place and have some time for personal matters."

Willing to Pay Fee.

Willingness to pay a small monthly fee for parking his automobile near his office in Commerce Building is expressed by "Census."

"There are hundreds of clerks in Commerce who would gladly pay $1 or $2 a month for space nearby to park their cars. We are not asking for palatial garages. We simply want to get our cars off the streets and away from frequent police tickets which are cutting deep into our shrunken salaries," the letter further says.

"I'd like to see Senator Kean raise four children in a downtown apartment on $1,800 a year," declares "Estate Tax" at Internal Revenue. "My car is a necessity because I have to live out of town where the rent is cheap and where the kids can get out of doors. But, I am faced with the problem of giving up the car or continue to pay a lump out of my wages almost every week for parking fines."

The foregoing three quotations are typical from a stack of letters that have come into the Diary since the Senate Committee hearing last week on the parking problem.

Membership applications are pouring in, D. E. McQueary, Veterans Administration, reports for the newly organized Association for Adequate Parking Facilities for Government Employes. The Federal Diary will accept applications for the Parking Association and will forward them to Mr. McQueary.

PWA Bond Plea By Valley Town Finally Granted

Water Revenue Securities to Be Accepted From Broadway.

Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 1 (Spl.). The tangle over security for a PWA loan to the town of Broadway for construction of a deep-well water system has been straightened out and the Public Works Administration at Washington will advance $40,000 to the community, George S. Aldhizer 2d, attorney for the town, was advised today.

About a month ago the PWA approved the loan. Two weeks ago it asked that the security be made general obligation bonds instead of revenue bonds, the latter pledging the receipts of the water plant. Negotiations were renewed at Washington, with the result that the PWA agreed to accept the revenue bonds.

A town election will be held for the voters to pass on the $32,000 issue.

MEMORIES of last year' thrill-drenched game, decided in an extra period, recur this morning as the Catholic University and Maryland court teams impatiently await the ninth annual renewal of their series tonight at Ritchie Coliseum. The game starts at 8 o'clock and will be followed immediately by a match between the Maryland and Duke boxing teams.

A throng of 1,500 fans saw C. U. come from behind in the waning minutes of the game last season and with a desperate, breath-taking splurge tie the count at 26 to 26 on a long shot by Gene Augusterfer and win out in an extra period, 29 to 27. Tonight more than 4,000 fans, hoping to see another wild, palpitating battle, will squeeze into the Coliseum, and unless one of the contenders goes completely haywire they'll get their thrill of hard, fast basket-ball.

Four Veterans Back.

Catholic used only five men last year, and four of these, Gene Augusterfer, Babe Gearty, Eddie White and Abe Rosenfield, will grace the line-up tonight. The fifth man, Bernie Lieb, sophomore center, has played brilliantly heretofore, but he may encounter his Waterloo in Rufus Vincent, Maryland's veteratn and clever tap-off artist.

Maryland, too, is well supplied with vets who participated in the memorable Battle of Brookland. Roy Yowell, Bob Snyder, "Spider" Chase, Vincent and Bucky Buscher, played in that game. Tonight they will be augmented by Bernie Buscher and Vic Willis, the latter a 6-foot 6-inch reserve center, who is also used at forward.

Maryland Favored.

Despite the fact that it has lost 4 of its 9 games, while C. U. boasts 10 victories in 11 efforts, Maryland rules a slight favorite. Playing on its own floor and a pronounced advantage in heights are the factors in Maryland's favor. Then again, Catholic's opponents have not been as consistently strong as Maryland's.

Catholic's outstanding achievements are victories over Navy, Duke and Loyola. Maryland toppled Michigan, Duke, V. P. I. twice and Virginia. The Terps visit Annapolis tomorrow for a tiff with Navy.

Maryland rules a heavy favorite over Duke's mittmen, as the Southerners lose 2 points at the very beginning because they have no eligible heavyweight nor light-heavy. There will be bouts in both classes, however, and from all reports, good ones. The teams fought to a 4-4 draw last year.

Maryland's ring line-up tonight reads as follows: 115 pounds—Bill Waller; 125 pounds—Harry Carroll; 135 pounds—Dick Babcock; 145 pounds—Walter Webb; 155 pounds—Lyman McAboy; 165 pounds—Stewart McCaw; 175 pounds—Jack Herbsleb; heavyweight—John Birkland or Jack Combs. The last two men are newcomers to the squad.

Sandown, England, Feb. 1 (AP).—Kellsboro Jack, owned by the American sportswoman, Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark, and winner of the Grand National last spring, today was defeated three lengths in the Mole Handicap Chase over 2 miles 4 furlongs. The winner was F. Furlong's Briscoe.

An American victory was scored in the Prince Albert Handicap hnrdle race, however, when G. H. (Pete) Bostwick's Flaming, ridden by D. Williams, galloped to an easy victory over the 2-mile course to pay off at 100 to 7. F. W. Wilmot's Advance and four others trailed Flaming.

Goal in Last Minute Wins for King Quintet

Bristol, Va., Feb. 1 (Spl.).—The King College cagemen opened the second half of their basket ball season by defeating East Tennessee State Teachers, 44-42, with a goal in last two seconds of play.

The goal, shot by diminutive "Tige" Harris, left his hand just as the time whistle blew for the end of the game. Previously, the two teams had see-sawed back and forth for eight minutes with first one leading and then the other. At the half the vistors lead by a 19-16 score.

Yale's Alumni Criticize New Grid Staff

Bulletin.

New York, Feb. 1 (AP).—Howard Cann resigned as head football coach of New York University tonight.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1 (AP).—Although outwardly rallying to the support of the new football coaching staff, headed by Raymond W. (Ducky) Pond, Yale alumni today displayed a lack of enthusiasm over the compromise solution of this problem, and clearly indicated that the Eli athletic house is still sharply divided against itself.

Criticism from those who have been agitating for a complete new deal in football at New Haven was aimed principally at Malcolm Farmer, the director of athletics, who is charged with sidestepping the main issue, involving an experienced head coach, and at the same time weakening the established graduate policy by engaging three "outsiders" to assist Pond.

Called Noble Experiment.

"Pond is well liked, personally, and will be supported wholeheartedly this year," said a spokesman for alumni, who were most insistent in their demands for a complete shake-up, "but the new set-up hardly will suit either side of the argument. Pond is the third head coach selected without previous varsity experience. He may measure up to the job, with the help he is getting from a seasoned coach like Earle Neale, but it is simply another noble experiment for the sake of an outworn policy."

Most of the members of the alumni advisory committee, which favored the engagement of an outsider as head coach, preferably Harry G. Kipke, of Michigan, were reluctant to comment. It was indicated this committee will meet soon with Farmer for a further discussion of plans and that the groundwork may be laid for further coaching developments in 1935, if the latest set-up fails to produce the desired results.

Rockne Style Discarded.

Meanwhile, it is clear that Yale has definitely discarded the Rockne system, featuring the back-field hop-shift, after several years of experimentation under Mal Stevens and Reggie Root, with such former Notre Dame stars as Adam Walsh and Bucky O'Connor as aids. This style of play, calling for long drill and perfect timing, has not been successful at New Haven because of the restrictions on practice.

Yale, instead, will go back this year to old-fashioned fundamentals, placing more stress on the so-called "punt-pass-and-prayer" system, popularized by Michigan. Pond has already indicated he will emphasize the kicking game. At the same time, spin-plays and certain other features of the Warner or Rockne systems will be adapted to Yale's use under the experienced tutelage of "Greasy" Neale, who is considered one of the best strategists in football.

Carnera, Schmeling to Fight Uzcudun at Same Time—Yeah!

NEW YORK, Feb. 1 (AP).—The banking experience of Louis Soresi, newest of all Primo Carnera's managers, won the Goliath of Genoa a bloodless victory today over Joe Jacobs, manager of Max Schmeling, in a struggle of financial statements that has the fight business dizzy.

"My Primo," announced little Soresi, who gave up a vice president's post in a bank here to manage Carnera's fighting and bankruptcy suits, "will fight Paulino Uzcudun in Buenos Aires in March or April for 1,000,000 lire. It is all arranged."

"My Max," he snorted, "will fight Paulino in Barcelona, Spain, on April 8, and not for no lire, either. He gets 275,000 pesetas, which is a lot of dough, and you can look it up and see. Me, now, I've misplaced my glasses at the moment or I'd tell you."

Experience Helps Out.

That was where Soresi's experience in banking circles, where he worked in the foreign exchange department, sent Jacobs reeling to his corner biting his nails. One million lire turned out to be lots more than 275,000 pesetas, as many more, in fact, as $84,000 is to $40,000 of newly devaluated 59.06 per cent gold content.

Though there's a lot of water between Spain and Argentina and scarcely enough time to travel it between March and April, both managers insist that their athletes will take another shot at Paulino in these distant places upon the occasions designated.

Carnera already has won two legs on the permanent Paulino trophy, Schmeling but one.

The German was first to find out about the Golden Oak of Pyrenees, and he chopped him up and down in 15 rounds at the Yankee Stadium in 1929 to qualify for the match in which he won the heavyweight title from Jack Sharkey on a foul. Schmeling also got about $75,000 for his one-sided victory.

Carnera went to work on the squat Spaniard a year later, beating him in Barcelona in ten rounds for a handful of pesetas. He did it again in Rome last summer, over the 15-round route, before close to 70,000 of his Italian countrymen, and his reward was a nice big Fascist medal.

Other Battles First.

Both Carnera and Schmeling have previous engagements here before starting the race to get at Paulino first. Primo defends his heavyweight title against Tommy Loughran in Miami, February 22, and Schmeling tackles Steve Hamas in Philadelphia, February 13.

In the meantime, the financial fervor of the dead and gone days of Tex Rickard has bitten the lightweghts as well.

Barney Ross, champion of the 135-pounders, offered Jimmy McLarnin welterweight king, a $35,000 guarantee for a match this spring, with McLarnin countering with a demand for $50,000. Today Tony Canzoneri who lost the lightweight title to Ross and failed to get it back in a return bout, took a deep breath and offered Ross a guarante of $35,000 for another chance at the championship.

In the midst of all these staggering ciphers, Madison Square Garden went laconically about the task of staging a ten-round bout tomorrow night betwen Canzoneri and Cleto Locatelli, European champion, whom Tony almost knocked out in a previous match.

Brains, Not Brawn, Favor Plebe Crew

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 1 (AP).—Coach C. S. Walsh is not worrying about having an intelligent plebe crew at the Naval Academy this spring, but he is wondering where the muscle is coming from.

Only two of the 24 candidates reporting for practice passed the strength tests required of every midshipman, causing him to discontinue the plebe practice for the time being.

But Coach Walsh pointed out that while the young middies may not have qualified in all of the strength tests, for the first time in the nine years of coaching plebes, all members of the squad came through the scholastic tests at the end for the first time.

"It looks like the plebes will have to capitalize on their brains," he said, "and win their races between the ears."

EASTERN and Central, league coleaders in the inter-high basket ball race, probably will cement their spots more thoroughly in the standings when they clash with Roosevelt and Tech, respectively, this afternoon.

The return to form of the defending championship Central team against Roosevelt last Tuesday has thoroughly convinced the followers of the high school warriors that the Mount Pleasant five and Eastern will stage the battle of battles for the final supremacy of the court sport for this season a week from today.

No Reason for Doubt.

That Central should have a fairly easy time of it, against Tech, there seems no reason to doubt. The Mount Pleasanters have zipped out of the doldrums after floundering about on the brink of several disastrous defeats.

Tech, Central's rival today, shot its bolt—a bolt into the blue and white clad basketers of Eastern—in the opening set-to of the series for the one and only surprise of the race. Then the Technicians collapsed because of the loss of Forward Al Gillem, who was mowed down by the flu after the second game of the series, and Jimmy Roland, who passed out of the picture after fracturing his leg. And Jimmy was no slouch as a forward.

Roosevelt Crippled.

Roosevelt takes the floor today against the championship-conscious Eastern five minus the services of the only thing that resembles a basket ball player in Ruf Rider livery—Jimmy Cavanaugh, who graduated yesterday.

Cavanaugh was the tough nut against Eastern in the first game between the two teams a month ago. The sorrel-topped graduate came through with 17 points and caused no end of trouble to the Lincoln Park team. But with this spark plug gone, the Ruf Riders are another easy milestone in the march to the basket ball title.

It is Gay Edelin's turn to roll up a bumper crop of points for the Eastern team, and the Roosevelt game has been delegated to him for a chance at high scoring honors.

Aldie Teams Score.

Aldie, Va., Feb. 1 (Spl.).—The Aldie boys basket ball team defeated the Winchester team here, 38-36. The Aldie girls also defeated the Winchester team, 51-17.

Rosenbloom, Knight Bout Postponed

Knight Disappointed.

"Well, I guess it can't be helped," said Knight glumly as he stalked back to his training quarters to resume workouts.

Announcement of the postponement was received by the champion without comment. Frank Bachman, Maxie's manager, did the talking.

"We don't stand to lose," said Bachman, "because Knight has been brought to a pretty fine edge for a battle tonight, and it'll be hard to hold him for four days more at the peak."

The fighters will weigh in Monday afternoon, when each expects to come in under the 175-pound limit.

Rosenbloom has been given a $15,000 guarantee, win, lose or draw. Knight will get 50 per cent of the gross, after 10 per cent has been deducted for the Miami Baby Milk Fund, and will give Rosenbloom his $15,000 from that.

Both boxers plan to go through daily workouts until Sunday.

Court Card Revised By Hampden-Sydney

He said the return of Bill Formwalt, a football casualty, to the line-up after suffering a broken arm last fall, will strengthen the Tiger attack.

La Salle Triumphs.

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 1 (Spl.). Beall High School's small and inexperienced basket ball quintet was no match for LaSalle Institute as Coach Pat Conway's team chalked up its third W. M. I. victory in four starts at SS. Peter and Paul Hall by the score of 36 to 10.

High School Highlights.

FIVE YEARS AGO Bowie High School put a basket ball team on the floor and has yet to win its first game. The Bowie quintet has but two games remaining on its schedule and there is a possibility that the realization of a game on the right side of the column will be fulfilled in the next two weeks. The team plays Laurel and Oxon Hill, which managed to win in earlier games.

Should Mike Kelley's team win the basket ball championship at Eastern, and it appears practically assured, he will have been the only coach in the local high schools to have coached three title holders in three different sports. Kelley, who is a graduate of Holy Cross University, tutored the championship football team while at Central in 1926, and his aggregation won track titles in 1930 and 1931.

One of the local high schools may publish an all-time athletic record book, illustrated with photos of the past greats. Such a handbook would be not only an amusing tome for cold winter nights and the peacemaker in friendly arguments, but a well-thumbed edition and aid for the press.

St. John's at Washington-Lee.
Georgetown Prep at Langdon.
Kendall at Gonzaga.
Alexandria at Fredericksburg.
Emerson at Washington-Lee frosh.
Bethesda-Chevy Chase at Takoma-Silver Spring.

Macadam, Croon and Eurydice Complete His 'Quartet.'

HIALEAH Park, Feb. 1 (AP). Jockey Earl Porter, who in the short space of a year, has earned a ranking among the ace riders of the Nation, added another feat to his list of saddle achievements today when he rode four straight winners at the local course. Porter, 96-pounds, of "riding fool" began his string with Macadam, a 6-1 shot, in the third race. He came back in the fourth race with Mrs. K. Jesberger's filly, Croon, to win the outstanding event of the featureless program at a $6.60 mutuel. In the fifth, he rode Squeeze Out, at $38.40, and completed the quartet with Eurydice, which won by 8 lengths at a $2.90 pay-off.

Porter boosted his total winners for this meeting to 11 and now has 47 winners for the Florida season.

Half-Length Winner.

Croon's victory was a compliment to both horse and rider. Fancy Flight showed high speed in taking the lead in the 7-furlong race and breezed along in front while Porter held Croon under wraps some two lengths off the pace. In the stretch, Porter gave Croon her head and they hooked up in a duel with Fancy Flight and Humphries. Croon drew away in the final strides to have a half-length advantage at the wire.

Quickly, backed down to $2.60 for $2, never left a doubt as to her superiority over seven other sprinters in the first event. 100 Horsemen Confer With Widener and Donovan, Pledge Aid in Doping Drive

Group Is Told Rules to Be Enforced

Justice to Be Sought; Club Is Willing to Pay Chemist.

Rulings Are to Be Kept Secret Until Probe of Charges.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. - (AP).—In an effort to bring about a better understanding between trainers, owners and racing officials regarding the campaign to stamp out the doping of horses, 100 horsemen today conferred with Joseph E. Widener, head of the Miami Jockey Club, and Walter Donovan, secretary of the Florida Racing Commission.

Since the Florida racing season opened, action has been taken against two men, charged with stimulating their horses. Ed Haughton, well-known Kentucky trainer, was ruled off the turf by the racing commission, while Nat Ray, whose Kiltamond was found to have been stimulated, was suspended by stewards at Hialeah Park and his case referred to the Florida Commission. Ray will have an opportunity to present his side Tuesday at which time Haughton may appeal if he so desires.

Rule to Be Enforced.

Both Widener and Donovan told the horsemen that the rules of racing would be enforced, but that it was their aim to do so without being unjust to the horsemen. The head of the beautiful Miami course, who also controls Belmont Park, said the Miami Jockey Club would be willing to pay the salary of a chemist selected by the horsemen to represent it in making saliva tests of horses at Hialeah.

Hereafter, however, the rulings of the stewards and commission will not be made public until after the matters have been thoroughly investigated and a final descision reached. In return the horsemen pledged their support in abolishing the doping of horses.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

The battle of the wooden gun, which turned out to be one of the cleveriset strategical victories of the American Revolution, was "fought" late in June, 1780, between forces of American troops led by Col. Washington, and a Tory company in charge of Col. Rugeley, in Kershaw County, S. C.

The Tory colonel had fortified his log barn and house against attack by the rebels and was, as it turned out later, well equipped to meet the attack of Col. Washington's troops—if, of course, the actual attack had been made.

Instead, however, the Americans resorted to a ruse which resulted in their taking the Tory stronghold, its personnel and equipment, without either side firing a shot. A pine log was drawn up on a rise overlooking Rugeley's position, so as to appear to be a cannon ready to fire a shell into the colonel's fortifications. Col. Washington then demanded immediate surrender of the Tory company.

Looking into the muzzle of what he thought was a heavy cannon, Col. Rugeley lost no time in yielding to the rebels' demand.

Dear Al:

Jockey Earl Porter is a great little rider but he certainly played a trick on Mike and I today. In fact, if it had not been for the sensational piloting of this boy, we might have swept today's program. As it was, we had three winners—Quickly, Somebody and Momo, the last named at a $12.30 mutuel. In the four other races our win selections were second and each time Porter was on the front end of the race. Everything considered, it was a fair day for the Bennings camp. A tropical storm has developed that promises to give us a muddy track tomorrow. There was a rumor around today that horsemen were contemplating a strike, due to the doping charges against Trainers Nat Ray and Ed Houghton. However, differences were ironed out and these men will be given a hearing Tuesday.

BILL.

First race—Granny's Trade gets in with light weight and I have been advised by Clocker Mike to put this one on the top of the heap. Speedy when right and I'm told Granny is right. Blackmock ran a fair race for us last out. Picks up weight, but is dangerous. Off Duty for the show end.

Second race—Prosecutor showed some promise in that recent outing and gets the Bennings call over these baby racers. Forever Young is a well-bred thing that may make the top one hustle. Up and Up to complete the money picture.

Third race—Mumsie gave the clockers an eyefull the other morning. Will like teh track and appears ready to take care of this field. Lynx Eye is a well-regarded youngster and figures to lear Fair Joan, a recent Bennings winner, to the finish line.

Fourth race—Gold Step failed us last out, but I'm stringing along. Will appreciate the off-track tomorrow and gets only a steadying impost. Feudal Lord's last was a beaut. Deserves at least second call. The upsetter may be Character.

Fifth race—Little Corporal has been oiled and greased fo ra race of this sort. Gay Joe is consistent and probably will draw the bulk of the play. Chrysmute, a Bennings success in that last effort, will be ready if the top two make mistakes.

Sixth race—Stone Martin, the old war horse, is in excellent shape and with prospects of a soft track under him should really turn on the speed tomorrow. He will have the lightly-weighted Everfair as the chief contender. Surety figures right with the top pair and will be dangerous.

Seventh race—I am going right out on the limb here. I'm taking Bright Beauty to win the final on an off track. She was a much-claimed mare with none too good footing in Maryland last fall. The various owners ran her legs off. She was rested and merely trotted behind a field here the other day. At least one of her workouts here has been excellent. Prince Takalon and Political for the rest.

Water Poloists At Shoreham Tonight

Home Team Looks for Hot Battle Against Baltimore Y. M. C. A.

THE Shoreham team will meet the Baltimore Y. M. C. A. in the second game of the District A. A. U. water polo championship series, to be played in the Shoreham's Venetian pool tonight, starting at 8 o'clock.

The Shoreham team swamped the strong Washington Canoe Club water aggregation, 11 to 0, in the initial game of the series, but the Baltimore head dunkers are expected to furnish even stronger competition than did the Canoeists.

Tipp, Varela Add Strength.

To last year's team the Shorehamites have added a smooth pair in Dave (Carnera) Tipp, who scored all 11 of his team's points in the opnening game, and Bob Varela. Tipp formerly played at the University of Pennsylvania and Varela at Duke.

The two coordinate perfectly in the water games, with Varela maneuvering elusively into position to feed the ball to Tipp, who uses his great size and strength to wade through the opposition to scoring position. Thornton Burns, another new member of the team, plays a cagey game, which strengthens the Venetian Poolers' play considerably.

An admission fee of 25 cents will be charged to tonight's contest.

Four Straight Wins for Porter

The second race went to another odds-on choice. J. E. Widener's Somebody was considered a sure thing by the talent and though he won, he was all out to beat Sturdy Ark by a length. The latter closed very fast in the stretch and got up to beat the weakly ridden Beoff by a head for the place. Somebody raced Zulu Lad into defeat in the first six furlongs but had to be sharply driven to maintain his advantage in the last furlong. The colt returned $2.90.

Second for Macadam.

Wedding Ring failed to continue the good work of the favorites, the gelding winding up a poor fifth in the third race. Macadam scored her second straight triumph at the lucrative odds of $14.20 for $2, leading throughout and driving home by a length under Porter's hustling handling. Claremont, the one to force the pace, was an easy second over Energetic Boy.

Porter's army of followers had hardly cashed their winning tickets on the fourth event when the Earl came right back to score his third-straight success in the fifth race. The Geneva mite drove Squeeze Out home by nearly two lengths and the crowd let out a yell when the filly's straight price was hoisted —$38.40. Chimney Top, the favorite, was second, two lengths before The Bailiff. The latter pair vied for the early lead, but neither was a match for Squeeze Out when the stretch drive arrived.

Eurydice Scores.

Porter continued his remarkable winning streak with the running of the mile event, sixth on the card. The Illinois lad had much the best horse under him in Eurydice, a $2.90-for-$2 favorite, which registered by eight open lengths. Porter rushed the filly to the front in a few strides and his mount increased her advantage with each pole. God o' War was always second, finishing with a length to spare over Neverfail.

Porter had the leg up on Well Built in the nightcap, but the filly was used up racing with Raccoon and finished fourth. Momo, paying $12.30. won the race by a length from Fabius, with El Puma third.

Frederick Cage Teams Score Double Victory

Frederick, Md., Feb. 1 (Spl.).—Frederick scored an easy double victory over Brunswick in the County high school league, the boys winning, 41 to 15, and the girls, 39 to 19. The boys took the lead at the start and increased their score in each period.

Frederick girls ran away with their rivals after the first six minutes. Miss Bowers scored the first goal for Brunswick. Miss Krantz evened the count for Frederick on the next play and thereafter the Orange and Black scored almost at will. Miss Martin, Brunswick guard, collapsed in the final period and was carried from the floor.

Petrolle Can's Quit; Takes Up Refereeing

Petrolle has applied for a referee's license and has been advertised as referee for the windup bout on a local boxing card Friday night.

P. F. (Pro Football) Degree Asset to Coach Job Seekers

IN the very near future, an eligible applicant for a college football coaching job may have to possess a P. F. degree.

A P. F. degree is one earned by a graduate of professional football and from the gradual change in the policies of coach-selecting as is being effected by the powers that be, there seems no doubt that the future college coach must show a cracked proboscis and a broken bone here and there, suffered under fire with or against the Chicago Bears, Green Bay Packers, Boston Red Skins and other greenbacking gridders.

The case of the College of the City of New York is an excellent item to prove the point. City College, hammered into the gridiron discard by a flock of trade institutions and jerk-water colleges, and most thoroughly by Lou Little and his potent soul-stirring rejuvenation of the game of pigskin at Columbia University during the past few years, has resolved for a change of front, and has placed the coaching assignment squarely into the hands of Benny Friedman, former Michigan All-American quarter back and recently a star backfield performer on pro grid teams in Detroit, New York and Brooklyn.

Little, Thornhill on List.

If that colossal real estate project, the Tournament of Roses game, is to be taken as a criterion, then coaches throughout the Nation would do well to follow the examples of Columbia and Stanford, incumbent grid leaders of the country, who have former professional stars as their mentors.

Lou Little, coach of the Columbia Lions, played pro ball out of Philadelphia prior to his acceptance of the head football coaching job at Georgetown ten years ago. Charley (Tiny) Thornhill, head man of football at Stanford, earned his professional football degree playing out of Cleveland.

Other successful coaches with P. F. degrees are Dr. Jock Sutherland, head coach at the University of Pittsburgh, who was a member of the old Canton Bulldogs that flourished 15 years ago. Another prominent coach of the day and highly considered for the vacant Ohio State coaching post, who played with Sutherland on the Canton team, is Gus Dorais, coach of the University of Detroit and a college teammate of the late Knute Rockne at Notre Dame.

Earl "Dutch" Clarke, 1928 all-America quarter back, joined the pro ranks upon graduating from Colorado University, played with the money boys for a year, then returned to assume coaching the Colorado School of Mines with marked success.

Several Terms for Casey.

The present coach of Harvard, Eddie Casey, was a member of a pro grid outfit in Ohio in 1921 and Vic Hansen, one of Syracuse University's immortal football stars, and present coach of his school, obtained his degree after several terms on the money gridiron.

Elmer Layden, the new Notre Dame coach, and a member of the Four Horsemen, barnstormed for a year with his graduating teammates throughout the country, then settled down to put Duquesne University on the gridiron map and is now hired to regain the South Benders' lost gridiron prestige.

Incidentally, every Horseman and Mule of that 1925 Notre Dame outfit, with the exception of Don Miller, who would rather be and is a full-fledged lawyer, have responsible coaching berths throughout the length and breadth of the land.

Navy Swimming Team Opens Against Colgate

Chief among the losses is Ray Thompson, sprint specialist, captain of the team, member of the American 1932 Olympic team and intercollegiate and National collegiate title holder.

The 1933 plebe team, which lost all of its four meets, has provided little material.

Army and Navy Urge Airplane Wind Tunnel

Vidal Also Recommends U. S. Build Device to Aid Aviation.;

Secretary Ickes yesterday received recommendation that immediate action be taken on the 500-mile-per-hour wind tunnel project of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics from the heads of the aeronautics branches of the Department of Commerce, the Army Air Corps and the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics.

Setting forth the need from the point of view of their respective organizations, Eugene L. Vidal, director of aeronautics in the Department of Commerce; Gen. B. D. Foulois, chief of the Army Air Corps, and Admiral Ernest J. King, chief of the Naval Bureau of Aeronautics, urged the Public Works Administrator to give consideration to the project, which calls for an allotment of $478,500.

Summarizing the advantages of the tunnel, Dr. Joseph S. Ames, chairman of the National Advisory Committee, pointed out that this new equipment, to be set up at the laboratories of the committee at Langley Field, Va., would make possible the use of greater flying speeds with safety, thus giving the United States decided advantages over other nations.

Speed an Urgent War Need.

It is needed urgently, he said, because superior speed is a dominant factor in aerial combat. The project would be self-liquidating, he pointed out, since it offers prospect of materially improving the economics of air transportation.

Researches of the committee indicate that speeds of 500 miles per hour are attainable, but knowledge of their fulfillment with safety is lacking and dependent upon the conduct of scientific investigations in a high-speed wind tunnel, Dr. Ames explained.

The site is owned by the Government and the necessary power already is available. Preliminary plans have been prepared and this work can be started within 30 days after funds are allotted, Dr. Ames concluded.

Further improvement in the economics of air transportation appears certain if higher speeds can be used with safety, Mr. Vidal said.

"The solution appears possible only through scientific research," he said. "I believe that it (the tunnel) will not only pay for itself, but go a long way to improve the safety and performance of American air transports."

Foulois Cites Present Handicaps.

Superior speed is the most valuable characteristic of a military airplane, Gen. Foulois said in his communication.

"Serious problems have arisen in the operation of airplanes at speeds above 200 miles an hour which menace structural safety and handicap future progress," he said.

"I believe the greatest need in aviation today is the project submitted by the advisory committee for a full-speed wind tunnel * * * and that early provision of such a tunnel will make possible the solution of outstanding problems and give to American military aircraft a decided advantage in speed."

"We are anxious that these problems be solved," said Admiral King, "and this can not be done in the absence of research equipment for the investigation of air flow at speeds of from 200 to 500 miles an hour. It is my judgment that such a wind tunnel is necessary for the development of maximum efficiency in naval aircraft, and that it should be provided at the earliest practicable date."

Emergency Aid Given Schools In Small Towns

U. S. Moves to Keep Open Institutions; Total of Fund Unknown.

Relief for more unemployed teachers and closing schools in communities up to 5,000 population was provided yesterday through indefinite grant by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

Funds will be used, Harry L. Hopkins said, for elementary and secondary schools where teachers have made unavailing efforts to keep schools in operation. The money will be available only for certified teachers for work during the regular school term. The funds can not be used for administration, maintenance, equipment or supplies.

Hopkins pointed out that none of the money can be used to pay back wages or to redeem warrants.

The United States Bureau of Education will cooperate with the Federal Emergency Relief Administration in carrying out the emergency program, it was announced. Relief authorities were unable to state how much money would be appropriated for the program.

As an effort to keep schools open in small communities the announcement was hailed as "encouraging to teachers" by Jesse Gray, president of the National Education Association.

"Teachers are not only doing all they can to promote the objectives of the New Deal," he said, "but have at great sacrifices to themselves sought to preserve the rights of childhood in this critical period. The action just taken through Federal Relief Administrator Hopkins is encouraging to teachers in both these efforts."

Man's Teeth Called Sound as Animals'

Scientist Disputes Theory They Are Weaker.

Baltimore, Feb. 1 (AP).—The popular belief that animals' teeth are healthier than humans' is disputed by Dr. Adolph H. Schultz, assistant professor of physical anthropology at the Johns Hopkins Medical School.

Speaking before the International Association for Dental Research, Baltimore section, Dr. Schultz last night explained research he has been conducting with teeth.

He compared the ages of eruption in the teeth of the lower primates with those of humans and disclosed that teeth of animals in their natural environment were abscessed, decayed and missing in almost equal ratio to those of humans.

Destroyers Recalled From Cuban Waters

Further cognizance of stabilized political conditions in Cuba was taken by the Administration yesterday as the Navy recalled the special destroyer force which has been on duty in Cuban waters since September.

The destroyers Ellis, Cole and Dupont, stationed near Key West, were reassigned to the training squadron. The Claxton was ordered out of Havana harbor, and the Bernadou, recently dispatched from New York as a relief ship, was ordered to turn back.

Ritchie, Rolph Due to Testify

Contrasting Attitudes Will Be Sought in Study of Anti-Lynching Bill.

(Associated Press.)

Chairman Van Nuys announced yesterday that Governors Ritchie of Maryland, and Rolph of California, would be invited to testify before his judiciary subcommittee considering the Wagner-Costigan anti-lynching bill.

Van Nuys has called for hearings on the bill beginning February 15, when proponents of the legislation will testify.

He said he had not yet completed the list of witnesses to be invited, but would include Ritchie and Rolph.

These two governors recently were placed in striking contrast in their attitude toward lynching. Rolph condoned a lynching in California about the same time Ritchie called out the militia to capture suspects in Maryland.

Van Nuys said many prominent individuals in the legal and journalistic fields would be called.

Husband Is Exonerated In His Wife's Suicide

New York, Feb. 1 (AP).—Cloyd B. Koontz, who faced a technical charge of homicide after it was found that he knew of his wife's suicide a fortnight before he reported it, was discharged in Brooklyn magistrates court today.

Koontz said that his mind "went blank" after he had found his wife a suicide and that he journeyed to Ohio, visiting a daughter in Cleveland and his father at Ashland, before returning and reporting the case on January 22.

Former Suitor Shot Twice by Film Extra

Hollywood, Feb. 1 (AP).—Beverly Granger, 27, a former film extra, was arrested today on a charge of assault with intent to commit murder, after police said she had fired five bullets at her former sweetheart, Earl Courtois, 38, a salesman. The man was wounded twice in the shoulder and once in the leg.

Bargain

Injuries at Sale Bring $35,000 Verdict.

Injuries she incurred when she attended a bargain sale at the Leonce Shoppe, 1115 G street northwest, in 1932, yesterday brought Mrs. William B. Lloyd and her husband a verdict of $3,500.

Suit was brought when advertisements depicting the bargains on sale brought such a crowd that some of the early comers were pushed through a plate-glass window. Among them was Mrs. Lloyd.

A jury in Justice Oscar R. Luhring's court, in District Supreme Court, yesterday decided she and her husband were entitled to an award because of lack of preparedness by store officials. The law firm of Fischer, Bendheim & Fischer represented the husband and wife.

Stocks Mount As Mart Yields To Optimism

Prices Climb 2.3 Points; Sales Set '34 Record of 4,716,370 Shares.

New York, Feb. 1 (AP).—With the currency formally devalued and tied to a modified gold bullion standard, Wall street today gave free expression to the optimism which the latest momentous happenings appeared to have engendered.

Stocks and bonds billowed up in very active trading, though commodities hesitated. Heavy placement of funds in securities, originating both here and abroad, was particularly interesting for the contrast it offered to the comparative sluggishness of staples which during the inflationary urges of last summer had done the leading. The country's debut on its new form of gold basis obviously caused many investors, as well as speculators, to feel that uncertainties incident to an unanchored monetary unit were being allayed.

Shares, in their biggest market since July 21, stormed ahead in huge waves of buying. Net gains could generally be reckoned at 1 to 3 points; a few were larger. At its best the market was even strong, but some of the exuberance was tempered by late profit-taking. Demand was broad. Many bonds did as well as stocks as trading rolled up one of the biggest turnovers ever recorded on the stock exchange.

Foreign Money Declines.

Foreign currencies, meanwhile, acted paradoxically in that they declined sharply when, according to the natural expectation, they should have advanced. The swift rise for dollars was attributed to foreign purchases of American securities and to confusion over the new regulations on gold.

Later, however, the situation in that respect cleared and arrangements were made for the first importation of foreign gold by a New York bank. Others will undoubtedly follow.

The financial community, looking for continued efforts toward credit expansion in the interests of reviving industry, saw its opinions strengthened when the New York Federal Reserve Bank, after markets had closed, lowered its rediscount rate to 1½ per cent from 2. With excess reserves close to the billion mark, it was pointed out that member banks were thus being given further incentive to expand credit at a time when the Government is coming into the money markets for heavy accommodations. Theoretically, this action also helps bonds by turning surplus funds into that normal investment channel. Furthermore, it was thought probable that the bank was seeking to forestall too great an influx of foreign capital.

Industrials Set Highs.

On the stock exchange, industrial shares, on the basis of the Standard Statistics average, broke through their summer highs for the first time in the present "bull market," thus overcoming what had been a resistance level. Chart followers interpreted this favorably, although some preferred to await a more decisive movement. It was noted that large amounts of stock were marketed on the rally; however, offerings were absorbed with little difficulty and the industrials' ascent to the highest ground since September, 1931, sent Wall street home in good spirits. Sales totaled 4,716,370 shares.

Chain store, railroad, motor, chemical, utility, farm implement, oil and specialty shares were prominent. Metals made a brave start in an opening which saw many 1,000 to 10,000 share blocks change hands, but fell back later.

At the close they were almost the only laggards, although some of the foods were slow. Aircrafts were quiet, except for Douglas, which reacted when its earnings report appeared. Montgomery Ward hustled up 3 points on an estimate that the company's January sales were 45 per cent better than last year. Most of the rails were up at least 1 to 2, and the same was true of miscellaneous industrials as well as utilities. American telephone was conspicuously strong, up more than 2 net.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Optimism in Wall Street More Unanimous Than Any Time in Many Months; Primary Emphasis Now Being Placed on Outlook for Trade.

By Ralph West Robey.

New York, Feb. 1.—Not in months and perhaps not in four years has there been such unanimous optimism in Wall Street as at present. Everyone, it seems, is firmly convinced that there simply is no question but that we have ahead of us remarkably improved business conditions and higher prices. The majority, too, seem equally convinced that there is a strong chance of our developing a "roaring bull market" in the comparatively near future.

Needless to say, there is far from agreement among various people in the street as to the exact cause for optimism. Or perhaps it would be more accurate to say that between different groups the emphasis is placed upon a wide range of things. In attempting to summarize the opinion of the street, therefore, one can not hope to do more than be approximately accurate, with the result that the final picture probably would not agree exactly with the views of any one man in the district. Nevertheless, the general argument holds together fairly well and, on the whole, it seems to me, involves less inconsistency than usually is the case when there are broad swings of opinion within the speculative and financial fraternity of New York.

Trade Outlook Takes First Place in Most Discussions.

The first general group of factors mentioned in most discussions has to do with the trade outlook. This, in itself, is a rather unusual development, for during the past several months Wall Street has laid the greatest stress in its appraisal of the outlook upon financial factors. The change in the point of stress does not mean that the financial elements are being overlooked, but merely that temporarily they have been pushed into the background by what is believed will be business revival.

Put in general terms, in other words, the district anticipates a strong rebound from the relatively dull seasonal business movement that we have been experiencing into an accentuated spring rally. Numerous elements are mentioned as indicating such improvement. One of the most important is the outlook for the automobile industry. It is recognized that during November and December production in this field was perhaps not up to expectations, but this is explained away on the basis of major troubles among the die cutters.

These troubles, it now is said, are a thing of the past for all practical purposes and consequently, we can look ahead to an especially good year. The most common figure that I have heard mentioned as probable production is 3,000,000 cars, or about 1,000,000 greater than last year.

Increased Consumer Demand Also Is Widely Emphasized.

Alongside of the automobile outlook is placed a widespread increased consumer spending power. From one end of the country to the other, it is emphasized, the reports on retail trade have been exceptionally good. Much of this, it is admitted, may have been the result of expenditures through the Civil Works Administration and the checks passed out by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. The important fact, in the opinion of Wall Street, however, is not the source of the funds but that the money is being spent.

Of the same general nature, too, is a gradual maturing of the plans for spending money by the Public Works Administration. This organization, it is said, now is getting itself in a position where it, too, can add substantially to the amount of purchasing power pumped into the economic organization.

The final major point on the side of trade is the probability of a price rise. This is anticipated not only for the general level of commodities but especially in the case of hogs and dairy products, with the result that the relation between various agricultural commodities will be brought more nearly into equilibrium and thereby relieve a strain that has been having an undesirable effect upon the business structure as a whole.

This, as I stated above, is merely that portion of the general picture which at present is being emphasized in the financial district. When there is added to it an equally favorable interpretation of the financial outlook it is not surprising to find that the street accepts a 4,000,000-share day as nothing more than a normal indication that we are on our way to prosperous times.

Bonds Capture New Highs in Heavy Trading

List Nearing 1933 Peak as Turnover Jumps $26,189,000.

New York, Feb. 1 (AP).—The bond market today celebrated the return of the United States to a modified gold standard with a sweeping advance which included all categories of listed loans.

While the speculative possibilities of a dollar revaluated to 59.06 per cent of its former parity, together with a new fixed gold price of $35 an ounce, acted as an especial spur to secondary issues, most prime investment ratings maintained a steady to firm tone.

With transactions totaling $26,-189,000, par value, against $19,435,000 yesterday, the day's aggregate was one of the largest on record. An exceptional was the total of $30,121,-000 on March 20, 1930.

New High Average.

The average for 60 domestic corporate bonds advanced seven-tenths of a point to 82.7, which was only eight-tenths of a point under its peak of last year. The average for 20 industrials again established a new high since 1931. Both the rail and utility averages made new 1934 tops and were not far from their 1933 highs.

United States Government securities held advances of two thirty-seconds to ten thirty-seconds of a point, but the turnover here amounted to only about $1,600,000, compared with $2,300,000 Wednesday. Some Treasury support was reported in this list.

Gains of 1 to 3 or more points were scattered over a wide front in the corporation groups, with the rails showing the greatest activity. Among the most popular carrier gainers were some liens of Alleghany Corp., Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake Corp., Chesapeake & Ohio, Santa Fe, St. Paul, Chicago & North Western, Rock Island, Denver & Rio Grande, Erie, Great Northern, Illinois Central, International Great Northern, Missouri Pacific, N. Y. Central, Nickel Plate, New Haven, Rio Grande Western, Seaboard Airline, Southern Pacific, Southern, Wabash and Western Maryland.

Utilities and Industrials.

Principal utility and industrial advances were recorded by American & Foreign Power 5s, up 2; American Rolling Mill 5s, up 2¾; Dold Packing 6s, up 7; Goodrich 6s, up 1¼; three International Telephone issues, up 2 to 2¾; three Laclede Gas loans, up 3 to 5½; Niagara share 5½s, up 3½; Otis Steel 6s, up 3¾; Philadelphia Reading Coal & Iron 6s, up 3; Postal Telegraph 5s, up 2⅞; Republic Steel 5½s, up 2¼; Studebaker 6s, up 1; Utilities Power & Light 5s and 5½s, up 2¾ and 3, respectively; Warner Bros. 6s, up 1 and both Youngstown Sheet & Tube 5s, up about 1 each.

Bonds of Germany spurted 1 to 5 or more points on advices from Berlin that instead of a further reduction in long-term debt interests, holders of reich dollar bonds may receive more in the first half of 1934 than they did in the last six months of 1933.

Other foreign gainers of 1 to more than 3 included issues of Argentina, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Buenos Aires, Chile, Columbia, Copenhagen, Denmark, Dutch East Indies, France, Norway, Poland, Royal Dutch, Sao Paulo, Uruguay and Yokohama.

Transatlantic issues were firm in sympathy with Wall street, while gilt-edged securities and industrials hardened on investment buying. Oil shares sagged. The market closed steady.

Paris—Stimulated by favorable advices from Wall street, prices on the bourse advanced. Gold mining shares particularly improved on President Roosevelt's gold proclamation. Rentes were stronger and the market closed steady.

Berlin—Stabilization of the American dollar stimulated prices on the boerse, which were further favorably impressed by British and Italian disarmament proposals. The closing was firm.

Wheat Values Mount Slightly; Buying Wanes

Traders Join in Selling Drives for Profits; All Grains Higher.

Chicago, Feb. 1 (AP).—Transient upturns of but 1¼ cents a bushel for wheat today apparently indicated grain traders had discounted beforehand the immediate market influence of dollar devaluation.

The wheat market ended with practically all of the 1¼ cents advance wiped out, general public trading in grain having failed to broaden to any material degree.

Talk was heard that reluctance which speculative buyers displayed to follow wheat price advances was more or less due to belief that the Washington Administration did not favor at this time a sharp bulge in the wheat market until acreage reduction of spring seeding was better assured.

Wheat Close Unsettled.

Wheat closed unsettled at the same as yesterday's finish to ¼ cent higher; corn, unchanged to ⅛ up; oats, at ⅛ decline to ⅜ advance, and provisions showing 12 to 17 cents gain.

A brief show of activity and strength at the outset in wheat followed advances in gold and sterling, and buoyancy shown by the stock market. Exports sales of 1,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat, the largest amount in some time, was also a temporary bullish factor, together with absence of moisture relief for drought districts of domestic winter wheat territory Southwest and West.

On the other hand, sentiment was by no means unanimously bullish, and the wheat market soon ran into free selling on the part of traders who had anticipated Washington action in regard to the gold content of the dollar, and who were in a position to realize a profit on wheat holdings.

Many Attempts to Rally.

Numerous attempts were made to rally wheat from setbacks, which at times carried the market to slightly below yesterday's finish. The most successful effort of this kind took place in the closing hour, but the bulge failed to hold at the last, with offerings widening out and buyers backing away.

Lack of leadership among friends of higher prices was given as one factor in the disappointing action of the market.

Corn and oats closely duplicated the course of wheat. Provisions were responsive to a rise in the value of hogs.

Canadian Bank Sees Flow of Gold to U. S.

Ottawa Expects Business to Benefit by Fixing of Dollar Value.

Montreal, Feb. 1 (AP).—The Royal Bank of Canada says, in its monthly letter published today, that devaluation of the American dollar will probably have a substantial inflationary influence and will no doubt be followed by a heavy flow of gold to the United States.

"It would seem," the letter says, "that with fixing of the exchange value of the dollar at 59.06 in terms of its previous gold value not only will the exchange fund not have to intervene to support its value, but there will probably be a large—perhaps unprecedented—flow of gold to the United States, represented by a return of 'flight' money which, if it left the country before the United States suspended gold payments, would now represent a profit to its owners of about 69 per cent."

Superimposed on this movement would be the normal balances due to a creditor country which also enjoys a surplus in foreign trade.

Effect Upon Canada.

Ottawa, Feb. 1 (AP).—Observers here expressed the opinion today that the most important immediate effect upon Canada of President Roosevelt's new monetary policy will be that Canadian gold will probably now go to the United States, whereas for nearly a year it has been shipped principally to London.

The Canadian government has for a long time acted as agent for Canadian mines in the marketing of gold. Export of the metal from Canada was made illegal by Parliament last April, except by license from the department of finance.

Since then the department has bought all gold produced and sold it in the best market, giving producers the benefit of any increase over the Canadian price of $20.67 an ounce.

With President Roosevelt prepared to buy all gold offered at $35 an ounce, the United States now offers the best market.

Better Canadian Business.

The Canadian press said that, so far as could be learned, the United States monetary policy was looked upon in Ottawa as one that would almost certainly bring about a rise in commodity values and accelerate trade, all of which would be reflected by better business in Canada.

In addition, the Canadian press continued, the Dominion will benefit through the increased return accruing to the gold mines.

In the meantime, the gold in the Canadian treasury, about $72,000,000 worth, held as a coverage for Dominion currency which was bought at the Canadian standard price of $20.67 an ounce, shows a potential profit on the difference between the rate and the $35 an ounce which could be obtained in the United States.

United States currency was at a premium in Canada today, but the exchange rate, it was explained, was governed entirely by demand. Eventually the Roosevelt move will affect the exchange by virtue of gold movements which will follow, but no violent fluctuations are anticipated.

Johannesburg, South Africa, Feb. 1 (AP).—The market, following the lead from London, was strong and active today and, with higher gold prices, gold mining shares showed an upward tendency.

U. S. Apples Gain Favor On British Mart

Winchester, Va., Feb. 1 (Spl.).—Cables received here by apple brokers reported that Winesaps recently shipped from Virginia to the London market topped the auctions there at $8.50 per barrel for 3¼-inch sizes.

Only Albemarle Pippins, the choice of "royalty," have brought higher prices on the English markets this season than the Virginia Winesaps, brokers stated. After deducting $3.50 per barrel for transportation and auction expenses, the Winesap sales will net the local growers $5 per barrel, it was estimated.

York Imperial apples from Virginia recently brought $7.75 a barrel in London as compared with $4.92 a barrel in 1933 and $4.50 in 1932.

From Germany also came cables to local brokers relating an increased demand for American apples in that country. European fruit crops during 1933 were considerably below that of 1932, the cable added, thereby creating a demand for foreign fruit.

'33 Use of Cotton Highest Since 1929

(Associated Press.)

Consumption of cotton by domestic mills during the last five months of 1933 was reported yesterday by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics to have been the largest for that period since 1929-30.

Domestic consumption totaled 2,418,000 bales. The bureau predicted a further increase in the figure for mills consumption during January due to a marked increase in cotton textile sales and discontinuance after December of the NRA 16-hour maximum of weekly activity.

New Gold Value Boosts Supply Of World to $20,000,000,000

New York, Feb. 1 (AP).—Reckoned on the new gold value of the dollar, the world supply of monetary gold has jumped from some $12,000,000,000 to more than $20,000,000,000.

The United States monetary gold supply becomes about $6,800,000,000, in contrast to roughly $4,030,000,000 on the basis of the old dollar. American gold remains about one-third of the total world supply.

The next biggest hoard is that of the Bank of France, amounting to one-fourth of the world supply. The French Central Bank's reserve of yellow metal, according to its weekly statement, was $5,106,000,000, calculated on the new parity of 6.63 cents for the franc, although the franc has failed as yet to get up to that level. On its old parity of 3.92 cents the French gold would have been reckoned at $3,020,000,000.

The Bank of England's gold, according to today's statement, presenting it in terms of the old gold pound—the pound has not yet been revalued in terms of gold—becomes in terms of the new gold dollar $1,578,000,000. This is the third biggest gold accumulation.

Spain comes next, with monetary gold reserves of roughly $750,000,000, based on the new dollar, and Italy, Belgium and the Netherlands each have somewhat more than $600,000,000. Switzerland follows, with some $560,000,000.

Japan's gold reserve becomes in our currency roughly $250,000,000, and Argentina's about $180,000,000.

The smallest gold reserve for a leading central bank is that of the Reichsbank. The German gold reserve is roughly $140,000,000.

Dutch Cotton Goods Exports Decline in '33

That the Dutch cotton textile industry is losing ground in foreign markets is revealed in a report from Consul Carol H. Foster, Rotterdam, made public by the Commerce Department.

Exports of piece goods from the Netherlands, which amounted to nearly 12,000 metric tons, valued at 23,670,000 florins in 1932, declined in 1933 to 7,657 metric tons, valued at 13,810,000 florins.

Shipments to Netherland India, the principal overseas outlet, decreased from 7,269 metric tons, valued at 13,699,000 florins in 1932, to only 2,652 metric tons, valued at 4,816,000 florins in 1933.

Dutch cotton textile exports to the United States increased from 189 tons, valued at 455,000 florins, in 1932, to 457 tons, valued at 905,000 florins, in 1933. This increase resulted chiefly from larger shipments of dyed and variegated fabrics.

Import restrictions imposed in 1932 served to restrict cotton fabric importations into the Netherlands during the past calendar year, the report shows. Total receipts decreased from 6,178 metric tons, valued at 13,687,000 florins, in 1932, to 3,692 tons, valued at 7,516,000 florins, in 1933.

(Par value of florin equals 40.20 cents, United States currency.)

Banks to Be Represented.

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 1 (Spl.).—Roanoke and Salem banks will be represented at the annual convention of the Virginia Bankers Association at Virginia Beach June 7-9 by the following: Col. J. Sinclair Brown, president, Farmers National, Salem; E. B. Spencer, president, First National Exchange, Roanoke; R. B. Gunn, president, Mountain Trust, and C. W. Beerbower, assistant cashier, First National Exchange, both of Roanoke.

Production of Soft Coal Rises to 7,200,000 Tons

The National Coal Association, from incomplete car loading reports from the railroads, estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended January 27 as approximately 7,200,000 net tons. Production

Dollar Gains Strength on World Marts

London and Paris Hail Stabilized U. S. Money; Gold Shares Up.

London, Feb. 1 (AP).—The new American "lightweight" dollar held its own in the world money mart of ancient Lombard street today and strengthened, after earlier uncertainty, to close unofficially at $4.97⅛ in relation to sterling.

It opened at $5.03⅛ to the pound, weakened to a point 7½ cents to the pound lower than yesterday's close, and then started a recovery movement that took it, step by step, to a final official rate of $4.97¾, just ⅝ cent weaker than yesterday.

Persistent influences such as a growing bullish attitude on the London Stock Exchange regarding the American recovery program, a continued repatriation of American funds, and the existence of a favorable American trade balance reinforced the new dollar.

The gold price soared to a new high record in London bullion markets to 135 shillings six pence a fine ounce. Buying orders poured in.

Dealings in Mines.

Some sections of the British industrial markets sagged as British investors hurriedly realized on their holdings and looked toward Wall street for profits in American equities.

British officials and the British treasury were silent as oysters, and the Bank of England remained the sphinx of Threadneedle street as regards the latest dramatic move of the New Deal program, by which the dollar value was fixed at 59.06 cents.

Any talk of stabilization as a result of President Roosevelt's devaluation proclamation was viewed authoritatively as "premature."

That the fixed dollar-sterling ratio will eventually be around the old figure of $4.86, however, was the opinion of reliable observers of the situation.

Market dealers throughout the day centered their attention on American commodity prices as likely indicators of future trends. Some irregularity was foreseen because of the uncertainty regarding the President's gold policy.

Welcomed by France.

Paris, Feb. 1 (AP).—French financial circles welcomed today a "stabilized" American dollar, and one that was, they said, "one step closer to the gold standard."

The American currency fell off 28 centimes, meanwhile, on the foreign exchange market as a result of President Roosevelt's gold action, and closed at 15 65 francs (6.39 cents to the franc), compared to 15.50 francs (6.45 cents), last night's final rate.

Financial quarters expected further gold shipments to the United States as a result of developments of the last two days.

They pointed out that the dollar was only half way to the theoretical pegging point at its opening today at 13.65 francs (6.39 cents).

One difficulty was foreseen—that of keeping the dollar rate down—for the United States is a creditor, financial observers said, and the world is bullish on America even while disapproving of some of Mr. Roosevelt's ideas.

Confidence was expressed in several quarters that the franc will remain on gold even though British and American currency equalization funds may exert a "squeezing" pressure on France.

Better Business Expected.

Berlin, Feb. 1 (AP).—The expectation was entertained in Berlin financial circles today that the stabilization of the American dollar would have a tranquilizing effect on international business.

This belief and yesterday's British and Italian armament proposals, recognizing Germany's claim to arms equality, stimulated the bourse today.

The United States dollar declined .055 marks, meanwhile, and finished at 2.56 marks (39.06 cents to the mark), as against 2.615 marks (38.24 cents) yesterday.

Rome, Feb. 1 (AP).—President Roosevelt's announcement of the new dollar gold content was followed today by a drop in the exchange rate to 11.60 lire (8.62 cents to the lira) to the dollar. In the last few weeks the rate has hovered around 11.90. Bankers said they did not expect further marked fluctuations until the announcement of stabilization against foreign currencies.

188 Dividends Changed to Favorable List

New York, Feb. 1.—Favorable dividend changes in January, numbering 188, were more numerous than in any month since December, 1930, while unfavorable changes, totaling 58, were fewer than in any January since 1929, according to the Standard Statistics Co., of New York. Another favorable factor in the record for January was the payment by 31 companies of portions of the arrears on cumulative preferred dividends passed during the depression, paving the road to later resumptions. Detailed figures comparing January, 1934; December, 1933; January, 1933; and January, 1932, follow:

Total favorable	188	140	64	73
*Increased	37	17	4	7
*Resumed	87	65	17	12
*Extra	58	60	23	42

Increase in Demand.

Akron, Ohio, Feb. 1 (AP).—A six-day week, necessitated by increased demand, was announced today for the Goodyear, Goodrich, Firestone and General Rubber companies. Seiberling Rubber Co. announced production was running 62 per cent ahead of last January's figures.

United Fruit Earnings Rise To $9,240,941

Income Is Equivalent to $3.15 on Shares; $1.95 for 1932.

Boston, Feb. 1.—First among the larger industrial organizations the annual report of the United Fruit Co. was made public today in Boston. It is a comprehensive resume of the company's progress during the year 1933 and reflects a greater sense of security and a marked improvement over business conditions than shown in the two preceding years.

After depreciation, taxes and interest for 1933 have been considered, the company earned $9,240,941.65 or $3.15 a share. In 1932 the company earned $5,707,221.48 or $1.95 a share.

Cash and U. S. Government securities on hand at the close of the year amounted to $37,118,807.40, as compared with $27,067,916.99 at the close of 1932. This is exclusive of the company's insurance fund of $10,000,000, in U. S. Government securities.

Pittsburgh, Feb. 1 (AP).—Indicative of a steady upward trend in the steel business, the National Steel Corporation reported today a net profit for 1933 of $2,812,406, equivalent to $1.30 a share on 2,156,382 shares of common stock.

The figure represented more than a million-dollar increase over 1932, when the profit was $1,662,919, or 77 cents a share.

New York, Feb. 1 (AP).—Standard Brands Inc., and subsidiaries, report net income for the year 1933 of $15,048,795, equal to $1.15 a common share. This compares with $15,001,491, or $1.14 a share in the previous year.

For the final quarter the company's net income was $4,632,148, equal to 36 cents a share, against $4,753,816, or 29 cents a share in the fourth quarter of 1932.

Quebec Power Co. reports for the year 1933 gross earnings of $2,825,561 and net earnings, after operating and maintenance expense and interest, including exchange on bond interest, but before depreciation, of $1,000,881. These figures compare with a gross of $3,109,296 and a net before depreciation of $1,253,960 for the previous year. After transfers to depreciations and contingency reserve, and payment of dividends, the company's surplus at the end of the year, subject to 1933 income tax, was $315,747, compared with $307,102 at the end of the preceding year.

Directors of Congoleum-Nairn, Inc., have declared a dividend of 32½ cents a common share. Three months ago a quarterly disbursement of 25 cents and a special payment of 50 cents were made. The dividend is payable March 15 to stock of record March 1.

Reflecting the increase in business incident to prohibition repeal, National Distillers Products Corporation today reported a net profit of $4,173,215 for the December quarter of 1933, equal to $2.21 a share on the stock now outstanding. The old stock was split three for one several months ago. Third quarter profit was $1,477,925.

A semiannual dividend of $1 a share has been declared by Compania Swift Internacional. The dividend is payable March 1, 1934, to shareholders of record February 15, 1934.

Reserve Bank Rate Drops to 1½ Per Cent

New York, Feb. 1 (AP).—The New York Federal Reserve Bank today reduced the rediscount rate to 1½ per cent from the 2 per cent rate which had been in effect since October 20 last.

The new 1½ per cent rate—which is the rate which member banks may borrow from the Reserve—is the lowest since 1931, and is the lowest for any of the world's leading central banks. The Bank of England's discount rate is 2 per cent, and the Bank of France, 2½.

The 1½ per cent rate which endured for a few months in the summer of 1931 was part of a "cheap money" policy to stimulate recovery. It ended when England left the gold standard in the autumn of that year, and a huge run upon American gold reserves developed. The rate was pushed up to 3½ per cent in the autumn of that year.

The rate was subsequently cut to 2½, but it reached 3½ again last spring for a short time.

While official comment as to the significance of the new rate was lacking, banking quarters assumed that it was part of an aggressive credit expansion program in connection with the return to a modified gold bullion standard and the heavy Government financing.

Excess reserves are already some $900,000,000, which earn the member banks nothing, and on the basis of that, it was pointed out, they may expand credit to huge proportions.

Wall Street Briefs.

United States and Foreign Securities Corporation, an investment trust, reports net assets of approximately $26,028,000 at December 31, compared with $23,300,000 on December 31, 1932. The indicated asset value for the first preferred stock was approximately $123 a share, against $109 a share at the close of 1932.

Proposals for a capital write-down will be voted on by Baldwin Locomotive Works stockholders at the annual meeting March 1. The plan calls for a reduction in stated capital to $30,548,000 from $42,134,000. Of the new capital figure, $20,000,000 is to be allocated to the preferred stock and $10,548,000 to the common. The balance will be used in effecting certain adjustments in value of property, plant and investments.

Arthur E. Allen was named vice president in charge of merchandising by the board of directors of Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. today. He has been with the company since 1902.

U. S. Exports Of Autos Set Record in '33

December Sales of American Cars Highest in Year; Demand Up.

With exports of trucks and miscellaneous automotive products registering the highest valuation for the year, foreign sales of American automotive products during December were valued at $9,651,221, the record month for 1933, compared with $7,717,147 for November and $5,508,108 for December, 1932, according to P. R. Mattix, automotive-aeronautics trade division, Department of Commerce.

The overseas demand for passenger cars, which reached its peak in August, has shown a steady decline since that month culminating in the December figure of 2,969 units, valued at $1,761,870, the lowest month of the year.

The decrease from November of 3,438 units, valued at $2,014,458, was due entirely to the lessened demand for the low-price range "not over $850," since the three other price groups were slightly improved.

Leading Markets.

The Union of South Africa, Netherlands and Australia remained the leading markets for American passenger cars during December, with the latter country showing an improvement over November, while the other two were reduced both in number of units and valuation.

Belgium and the Philippine Islands were the next most important markets, both of which increased their demands, as compared with the previous month.

Truck exports were outstanding for the month, numbering 6,447 units, valued at $2,892,743. This represented the highest valuation for this group since March, 1931, when the figure amounted to $3,104,186.

Beginning with May, 1933, the monthly record of truck exports has steadily increased, with the single exception of November, closing the year with a gain of $1,022,710, or 54 per cent over the preceding month.

Spain Buys Trucks.

Spain was the chief purchaser of American trucks during the month, taking 751, valued at $320,708, compared with 282, valued at $191,684, in November. Other markets which substantially increased their purchases of American trucks in December were British India, Union of South Africa, Argentina, Belgium, Denmark, Brazil and Sweden.

Shipments of miscellaneous automotive products in December reached a value of $4,996,608, the highest monthly figure of the year, representing an increase of 30 per cent over November. Among the items in this classification which registered notable improvement were engines, parts for assembly, parts for replacement and accessories.

Service appliances, brake lining, trailers, motorcycles, motor boats and outboard motors all showed declines in December, as compared with November valuations.

Coffee Trading Triples In January Over 1933

New York, Feb. 1.—Coffee trading on the New York Coffee & Sugar Exchange, during January tripled the total of January last year, while sugar trading nearly doubled the previous January's trading. Trading amounted to 805,500 bags of coffee against 274,250 bags last year, a gain of 194 per cent, while sugar trading totaled 446,450 tons, against 246,950 tons in January, 1933, a gain of 81 per cent.

Both markets were advancing ones, coffee gaining 80 points, or 10 per cent, while sugar values advanced 22 points, or 16.3 per cent. Individual statistical-political developments, in addition to the generally better sentiment in other markets, were responsible for the climbing prices.

Walt Mason, Himself

Books.

My books are everyv here; they're piled upon the chair; and 44 are on the floor, and more upon the stair. My books are old and new, and some are false, some true; and some describe the human tribe, some tell of Irish stew. One tells how Coleridge dreams of evanescent schemes, of how he wades in mystic shades by strange Elysian streams. One treats of poor Leigh Hunt, of optimistic front, who suffered long, but sprung his song, nor wearied of his stunt. And here is Charley Lamb, who cared no tinker's dam, for ills that pained, and he remained forever in a jam. And old Bob Southey writes his epics, days and nights, and thought for sure he would endure among the world's delights. And Byron is on deck; and once I swore, by Heck, he was the best, and all the rest were but a total wreck. I live with folks like these; they do not talk disease, nor motor cars, nor movie stars, or flu, or spavined knees. They do not talk of pills, of gout or other ills; they don't defend, long hours on end, the tax in cents and mills. I'd rather walk with Keats along forgotten streets than wend with Jones and hear his groans about the grief he meets. I'd rather walk with Scott about his garden plot than hear Jim Bax discuss the tax, and all that sort of rot.

Radio Waves and Ripples

WE HAVE good news this morning for the Society of Civic Program Haters, of which we are a charter member.

N. B. C. has decided to put all currently active civic broadcasters—Community Chest, Federation of Citizens' Associations, Board of Trade, George Washington University Forum—on one full hour program beginning Monday night at 9.

It gives all civic-minded persons who are not members of the Society of Civic Program Haters a chance to get their civic program listening out of the way early in the week. And we members of the Society of Civic Program Haters who are not civic-minded persons know exactly what to expect and when.

N. B. C. may also profit by putting "for sale" signs on four vacant 15-minute periods.

Whitecaps.

WRC—Jessica Dragonette singing excerpts from Herbert's "The Enchantress" and "Orange Blossoms," 8 p. m.; radio comedy drama, "One Man Menagerie," which has to do with an animal imitator and his fiancee, 10 p. m.

WMAL—Fairy tales in music, Music Appreciation Hour, 11 a. m.; Maude Adams plays a new role in the Besier-Edginton drama, "Secrets," 9:30 p. m.

WJSV—Dueling in France, Stalin on Germany and Japan, March of Time, 8:30 p. m.; Soprano Mary Eastman, "Kiss Me Again," "Zigeuner," "Solvejg's Song" and "The Toreador," 10:45 p. m.

We wish we hadn't been so cocksure about Arthur Godfrey not taking immediate steps to get himself a New York job after reading his name in a Broadway column. Today's signs point in another direction.

Last and surest sign of all, he reverted to his Breakfast Club habit of sleeping through his morning broadcast without any warning whatsoever, leaving Elder Michaux, Engineer Earl Heatwole and Production Manager Al Chance to fill in the Sun Dial as best they could.

Instead of looking for a groundhog, WJSV is putting Charles L. Mitchell, chief of the Washington Forecast District of the U. S. Weather Bureau, on the air for more scientific weather prognosticating today.

"A tangled web in which four lives are involved will be offered to the radio audience for its untangling Sunday night when another session of the True Story Court of Human Relations is broadcast over the N. B. C.-WEAF network at 7 p. m., Eastern standard time.

"The four persons, a girl, her brother, her mother and the married lawyer with whom she is in love, find their lives inextricably bound together. Although the question is, on the surface, a simple one—should the girl run away with the married man?—the entire story reveals complicating angles and in facets that will give listeners who are invited to act as jury to the court difficulty in making their decision. Prizes are offered for the best decisions to the case."

Looks like anyone's ball game.

N. B. C. Announcer John Mayo went to New York last Sunday ostensibly to rest and see a few shows.

The other name on the license was given as Louise Cook, of Washington.

Donald Douglas, N. B. C.'s newest announcer, was in town scarcely a week before he had secured for himself two extra studio jobs—lecturing on autos at the automobile show and assisting as master of ceremonies at the Fox.

It was pretty touching the way Fred Waring signed off his cigarette-sponsored program series Wednesday night by plugging his successor, Ted Fiorito. Aunt Sadie thought it was mighty generous of Fred and said as much so often that we were forced to remind her of all the money the cigarette people have been paying him these many months. Aunt Sadie turned the dial to the place marked by the butcher for the Toledo police department.

As part of the ballyhoo for Moulin Rouge, musical cinema showing at one of the F street show houses this week, Senator McAdoo, of California, introduces a few of the visiting movie stars from a WRC microphone in the Senate dining room at 1:30 this afternoon. Mary Carlisle, Ben Turpin, Eddie Quillan, Dorothy Dunbar, Jack Mulhall, Creighton Hale, Antonio Moreno and Roscoe Ates will be heard.

Emma Redell, Washington soprano, has been cast as Elizabeth for the New York Opera Association's performance of "Tannhauser" from Newark's WOR Sunday night at 10 o'clock. It was in this role that Miss Redell made her debut with the Chicago Civic Opera Company in 1931, and in which she subsequently gained repute as one of the greatest Wagnerian singers in the world.

The lady is Connie Gates, C. B. S. singer, whose new schedule puts her before a microphone each Tuesday and Thursday at 12:15 p. m. No doubt the young man has been recognized as Dick Powell, film actor. With Ted Fiorito's orchestra he starts a new program series for Columbia Wednesday.

Accountants Differ On Gas Co. Capital

Findings Vary by More Than a Million.

A difference of $1,249,870 in service items submitted by accountants for the Public Utilities Commission and those offered by the Washington & Georgetown Gas Light Co., was revealed yesterday at valuation hearings before the commission.

B. M. Bachman, accountant for the commission, deducted $1,249,870 as customers' contributions from the service item of $2,100,739, while S. F. Kosters, accountant for the company, included this figure as part of the companies' capitalization.

Takoma Seeks Ban On District Movies

The Citizens Association of Takoma yesterday appealed to the House District Committee to enact a motion picture censorship law for the District.

In a letter to Chairman Norton the association urged that a bill be introduced to "provide some dependable regulation of motion picture exhibitions." The citizens proposed censorship and "complete exclusion of exhibitions which ought not to be produced at all."

CWA Workers Plan Protest.

A delegation from the CWA Protective League will call at the District Building on Monday to protest against cuts in hours and to demand that CWA jobs be continued.

Every District Scout troop and patrol has been shaping its program toward the big event of the anniversary week—the mobilization of all Scouts—which is to be held at the Washington Auditorium on Saturday, February 10.

From 9 to 10:30 Scouts will be moving to assembly points a few blocks from the Auditorium, and at 10:30 the roll call will begin. By 11 o'clock Scouts will be on their way to the Auditorium led by bands and followed by trucks piled high with clothing for the needy brought in by the Scouts.

At 11:45 the doors will close and at 12 o'clock a special Scout radio program will come from the White House, at which time President Roosevelt will speak to all the Scouts of America. Greetings also will be extended by Walter W. Head, president of the Boy Scouts of America, and by Chief Scout Executive James E. West.

Every leader and Scouter in Washington is asked to help in the big mobilization if at all possible. The general chairman is Commodore W. E. Longfellow and the vice chairman J. Wallace Talley. The unit marshals are W. H. McConnaughy, Edward M. Parkins, William Curtis Cooper, Virgil E. Howard, and the Auditorium marshal is Thomas A. King. Col. E. L. Mattice is the recorder of the mobilization.

The huge good turn mobilization will be participated in by Cubs, Land Scouts and Sea Scouts, as well as the leader of all these groups.

Following their appearance at the broadcast at the White House Mr. Head and Dr. West will come to the Auditorium and address the Washington Scouts in person.

Every Scout should attend church in uniform either February 4 or 11. Many troops plan to attend in a body.

Lady,

HAVE YOU BOUGHT YOUR COAT YET?

SOME of you have gotten into the habit—and it is a profitless one so far as we are concerned—of waiting until February or so to buy your winter coat. You know that this is the time when you can buy a coat for almost next to nothing. It's the truth—we mean, that coats are now at next to nothing—and there's not much more we can say about it. Many Washington stores have marked their winter coats down to prices that look up at a budget and not down at it.

And it makes no difference whether you buy your coat at The Hecht Co. or anywhere else. The fact remains, however, that by investing now, you'll save yourself many dollars on coats you can wear through this winter and next winter. Sotto voce: We won't feel badly if you do select your coat here.
